DEMOCRATS REVOLT AGAINST PLEDGE OF GROUP FOR HARMONY

Walsh Leads Senate Demand For Relief Program

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—The revolt of Democrats against the harmony pledge of their leaders spread in the senate today over the protests of administration spokesmen who insisted congress support the President in the present unemployment emergency.

The demand of Senator Walsh (D) of Massachusetts, that the Democrats propose a relief program of their own, met with considerable approval among his colleagues. Walsh declared the Democrats had become the majority party in the last election, that Mr. Hoover has abdicated his national leadership and that the Democrats should take the initiative in relieving agricultural and unemployment distress.

This declaration aroused the ire of Senator Watson, Republican leader in the senate.

"There is no need for another relief program," said Watson. "The Republican and Democratic leaders agreed to cooperate in this emergency. We agreed to take up Mr. Hoover's recommendations first and to work out a constructive program together. The President made certain recommendations which are constructive and which committees of the house and senate are now considering. There is no necessity to supplant his recommendations."

The Republican "young guards," meanwhile held another "conference," pledging united support to the President.

On the Democratic side, rebellion against the harmony program increased. Senators Wagner (D) of N. Y. and Trammell (D) of Fla., endorsed Walsh's idea of a Democratic relief program.

"I favor a Democratic program," said Wagner, author of a series of unemployment relief bills which have been sidetracked in the house. "I already have one. I wouldn't want taxes to be increased but this is an emergency and we can't let men and women starve. If sufficient federal funds are required, that to vote them would necessitate an increase in taxes. I would not be deterred by that fact."

Walsh had suggested an increase in surtaxes on incomes above $50,000 to meet increased expenditures in relief of unemployment. This too met with Republican opposition.

BETTMAN ANSWERS MANDAMUS ACTION

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 9.—An answer in the mandamus action recently brought in the state supreme court by William G. Pickrel, Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, against Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown, was filed here today by Attorney General Gilbert Bettman on behalf of the secretary of state.

Pickrel's action seeks to compel the secretary of state to announce the result of his canvass of the returns of the vote for the office of lieutenant governor.

The answer filed by Attorney General Bettman contended that the secretary of state has already publicly canvassed the returns and has announced their results.

The secretary of state has no legal duty to make any further announcement than that already made, Bettman set forth in his answer.

DROWNS ESCAPING POLICE ON CHARGE

FRANKLIN, O., Dec. 9.—Montgomery County authorities today were still dragging the Miami River here for the body of a man believed to be "Buck" Stevenson, who resided near West Carrollton.

Stevenson was drowned yesterday afternoon when he jumped into the river while fleeing from Lloyd Bailey, Franklin policeman. Officials said they had been advised by a Chicago mail order house that a man who signed his checks as "Buck" Stevenson had defrauded the company of several hundred dollars by issuing worthless checks.

Bailey attempted to arrest the man when he appeared at the Franklin post office and asked the clerk if there were "any packages for 'Buck' Stevenson."

RALPH DE PALMA, AUTO RACER, SUED

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Dec. 9.—Charging desertion, Mrs. Clara De Palma, wife of Ralph De Palma, noted auto racer driver, today had a suit on file for separate maintenance.

The De Palmas were married at Newark, N. J., June 30, 1909. They have no children.

Mrs. De Palma stated her husband deserted her last March.

The government contends Shepard administered poison to his wife that he might later marry Miss Brandon.

CHINESE HELD FOR MURDER OF HIS EMPLOYER

Woman Found Slain; Motive Sought By Police

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 9.—With Lui Fook, 60-year-old Chinese houseboy under arrest, police today attempted to establish a motive for the strangling of his employer, Mrs. Roseetta Baker, former wife of the late Dr. Clarence Clarke Baker, society physician.

The body of the 70-year-old woman was found a few hours after she returned to her apartment accompanied by Walter Middleton Outler, 26, an actor.

After the elderly Chinese apparently attempted to divert suspicion in his direction, Outler, together with Arthur Beale, pianist at the Green Street Theater, was taken into custody for questioning. They were released after suspicion shifted to Lui.

Lui had been in Mrs. Baker's employ for 14 years. Some time ago he was discharged for "impudence," but he was subsequently hired again. He was discharged when he complained to Mrs. Baker's business manager about her keeping company with young men.

It was Lui who first reported the death of his mistress. Police found that she had been strangled with a sheet. Her apartment was a scene of disorder, showing that she had put up a terrific struggle against her assailant.

Clues found in the apartment, police said, caused them to lodge murder charges against the Chinese. A heel from a shoe and a button were found. Police said a heel was missing from one of Lui's shoes and that the button corresponded with those on his clothes. They also found a patch of skin. An identical patch was missing from one of Lui's fingers, investigators declared.

SHOPPING DAYS TILL CHRISTMAS

Case Of Disorderly Conduct Will Be Heard Friday; Friends Rally To Jurist; Lindsey Jokes About Cleric

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—Bishop William T. Manning was under subpoena call today for his appearance Friday in West Side Court in connection with the disorderly conduct charge against former Judge Ben B. Lindsey of Denver, militant advocate of companionate marriage.

Announcement of the service late yesterday was made by Arthur Garfield Hays, counsel for Lindsey.

Lindsey, earlier in the day, was granted adjournment until Friday of hearing of the charge that resulted from his attempt Sunday in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine to answer Bishop Manning's attack against him and his theories of companionate marriage.

Hays also announced that he was considering bringing a personal suit against Bishop Manning in Lindsey's behalf.

Seven subpoenas were obtained.

COOPER PREPARING LAST LEGISLATIVE MESSAGE NOW, SAID

Will Include Plans For Improvement Of Government

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 9.—With in the next few days Governor Myers V. Cooper will get down to the serious task of preparing his last legislative message to be delivered the first week of the general assembly which convenes January 5, it was learned today from a source close to the executive.

For some time the governor has been mulling over the material which he wants to include in his message, but the actual work of putting it down on paper has not been started. Preliminary to drafting his message to the legislature, Cooper plans to hold conferences with members of his cabinet and other intimate advisers. Some of these conferences may be held this week.

While the governor has not definitely determined upon what he will tell the solons, state officials close to the executive said today that the message will be "of ordinary length" and will probably enumerate proposals designed to improve various state governmental activities. It will also review the achievements of the Cooper administration during the past two years.

CHICAGO PLANS TO FETE NOTRE DAME

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—Tomorrow has been proclaimed "Irish Day" by Hanton J. Cermak, president of the county board of commissioners, so Chicago can pay homage to the championship Notre Dame football team which returns from Saturday's victory over Southern California.

The team and Coach Knute Rockne will be met at the La Salle St. station where they will receive an official welcome.

Then, much in the manner of heroes returning from wars, transatlantic flights or golf conquests, the football team that won nineteen consecutive victories and topped off the string by a 27-to-0 victory over the pride of the Pacific coast will parade through the downtown area with a band and police escort leading the procession.

County and city officials will join in the parade.

STAGE AND PICTURE STAR-FACING SUIT

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Dec. 9.—Pauline Frederick, stage and motion picture star, today was a defendant in a suit to annul her fourth and latest marriage.

Bringing action in superior court the actress' husband, Hugh C. Leighton, charged that Miss Frederick failed to carry out her duties and obligations as a wife. They were married eight months ago in New York. Leighton said he was a husband in name only.

Miss Frederick and Leighton had been separated several months, it was revealed.

YOUNG FARMER KILLS WIFE AND THEN ENDS LIFE; SEEK MOTIVE

CARROLLTON, O., Dec. 9.—The motive which caused Floyd Townes, 20, a farmer, to shoot and fatally wound his wife, and then commit suicide, in the presence of his wife's parents who risked their lives attempting to defend her, was sought by county authorities today as they launched an investigation into the murder and suicide pact.

The shooting took place on the Townes farm near here. The young husband quarreled with his wife and her father earlier in the day. Townes is reported to have knocked down his father-in-law, William T. Thompson, and then drove to Carrollton where he obtained a revolver.

Mrs. Townes and Mrs. Thompson had taken refuge in the barn with Thompson when Townes returned. The young man rushed to the barn and shot his wife in the ankle.

Apparently sorry for his deed, he aided his mother-in-law to carry his wife into the house, and as she was being placed on a bed, he reached around the older woman and fired a shot into his wife's head, according to police.

Townes then turned the gun on himself, police said. Both died at once, instantly.

GIRL IS KIDNAPED

Here is Helen Louise Hamilton, 19-year-old Stockwell, Ind., high school girl, who was kidnaped from her home by bandits and later released in Chicago. The bandits entered her home, tied up her parents and declared their intention of robbing the Stockwell bank, of which the girl's father is cashier, when Helen's sister climbed out of a second story window and notified police. The bandits became alarmed and fled, taking Helen with them.

TWO BOMBINGS CHALLENGE TO CHICAGO COPS

New Furniture Mart Damaged $15,000 By Explosion

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—Two more mysterious bombings, one of which did $15,000 damage to the American furniture mart, one of the world's largest buildings, challenged authorities today in their drive to check the outrages.

A powerful charge of dynamite exploded at the entrance of the new furniture mart building last night, blowing in doors and iron gratings and shattering every window in the first five stories of that side of the structure.

Structural steel work and the terra cotta surfacing about the entrance was badly damaged and weakened. One stairway was wrecked by the explosion's force. The damage was estimated to be in excess of $15,000.

Police believe the dynamite was lighted and thrown from a passing automobile. Bomb squad experts could find no motive for the bombing.

A second bomb, the fourth in forty-eight hours, exploded in the front entrance of a west side butcher shop at approximately the same hour as the furniture mart blast. The damage here was estimated at $500.

Tony May, known as the "millionaire newsboy" died yesterday from injuries received when a bomb sent through the mails exploded in his home Sunday while he and 15 year old son, Eugene were opening it. The boy was seriously injured.

DOAK TAKES OFFICE

AMERICANS UNABLE TO CONCENTRATE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Americans are losing their power of concentration on any one subject because too much enter their minds in a short period of time through the medium of newspapers and moving pictures, Rep. Beck (R) Pennsylvania, told the Oldest Inhabitant Association last night at its sixtieth anniversary dinner.

Beck said the average person has not yet grasped the methods of taxation, particularly the income tax. He said residents of many states have good reasons for complaint, especially those in this city, for their part in helping to defray the expenses of the country.

SPEED AGE BLAMED FOR BLOOD PRESSURE

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 9.—The tendency of Americans to do things at high speed is responsible for most cases of high blood pressure which afflicts middle-aged Americans, according to Dr. David Reisman, professor of medicine at the University of Pennsylvania, who spoke before the Columbus Academy of Medicine here last night.

"America needs more loafers," Dr. Reisman declared in offering a panacea for the increase of high blood pressure.

"Americans," he said, "should cultivate the European's point of view. Meals now hurriedly gulped should be eaten leisurely and in pleasant atmospheres."

THREE KILLED IN PLANE FALL

Woman Among Air Crash Victims

SHANGHAI, Dec. 9.—Paul Baer, veteran American air pilot and former member of the famed Lafayette escadrille, was killed today with his Chinese co-pilot and a Russian woman passenger when their amphibian west-bound airplane struck a junk mast and crashed into Whangpoo River here.

Four prominent military men, passengers of the plane, were seriously injured.

Baer, whose home is in Fort Wayne, Ind., was 30-years-old. He was credited with having brought down eight German planes during the war.

The injured included General Hsiung Shih-Hui, commander of the Shanghai and Woosung garrison, and three members of his staff.

GUN COTTON UNDER SEA SINCE WAR CAUSES TRAGEDY

LA PALAIS, Belle Isle, France, Dec. 9.—Incised in their massive steel suits, the bodies of two divers were recovered today from the wreckage of the Italian salvage steamer Artiglio, which was blown out of the water and sank in the Bay of Biscay with the loss of twelve men.

The remaining seven members of her crew were rescued by another salvage ship in the near vicinity, but four of these were rushed to the hospital in serious condition.

Explosion of tons of gun cotton stored in the holds of the cargo ship Florence, sent to the bottom during the world war and since then a direct menace to shipping at its depth of 100 feet, was the cause of the tragedy.

The Artiglio, manned by a crew of intrepid seamen, had been occupied some months in an attempt to salvage $5,000,000 in gold ingots aboard the British steamer Egypt, which sank off Belle Island in 1922 with the loss of eighty-nine lives. Adverse weather caused temporary postponement of the project, when upon the French ministry of marine chartered the Artiglio to blow up the munitions wreck.

The same pair of divers who located the Egypt were sent down to locate the Florence exactly and place mines for its destruction. The mines were lowered for explosion from a safe distance, but it is believed one of them blew up prematurely.

WOMAN FACING LIFE IMPRISONMENT FOR SLAYING DAUGHTER

Mrs. O'Laughlin Is Convicted By Jury In Denver

DENVER, Colo., Dec. 9.—Mrs. Pearl O'Laughlin today faced the prospect of life imprisonment after a jury in district court last night found her guilty of murdering her 10-year-old step-child Leona.

After deliberating one hour and thirty-five minutes the jurors returned a verdict of first degree murder and Mrs. O'Laughlin was given a life term in prison.

The comely young wife received the jury's verdict with little show of emotion and walked from the court room back to her cell unassisted.

Mrs. O'Laughlin's attorney, John M. Keating, was given thirty days in which to prepare a motion for a new trial.

The child's body was found in a lacon in City Park October 17. Analysis of the vital organs disclosed that the girl had consumed ground glass with her food, thus causing her death. The prosecution charged that Mrs. O'Laughlin had placed the glass in food she had served the family.

Her husband, a Denver detective, was taken ill last October and prosecutors charged that he too was suffering from ground glass.

DETECTIVE IS ASSASSINATED

GALATZ, Roumania, Dec. 9.—Three assassins today shot and killed Detective Hagedinsky, who gained wide fame when he uncovered a vast Soviet espionage system recently.

The slaying occurred on the street here.

In his dying statement M. Hagedinsky accused M. Jolantkow, one of the chief Soviet figures in the espionage developments, of being one of his assassins.

Jolantkow was immediately placed under arrest.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—The worst fog experienced here this winter hampered London traffic for several hours today, although it did not interfere seriously with shipping on the Thames.

The thick mist forced King George to forego a grouse shoot he had planned in Windsor great park for the first time since his illness two years ago.

TURBULENT CAUCUS EXPECTED IN FIGHT FOR HOUSE SPEAKER

Three Candidates In Field; Williamson Backs Jones

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 9.—Although party leaders scouted the possibility of any "bolting," a turbulent session was generally expected today as Republican members of the state house of representatives prepared to caucus this afternoon and decide wherein and upon whom shall be placed the control of the body.

The candidates are in the field for selection to the speakership of the house. Each claimed sufficient support to win, but which way the wind was actually blowing was difficult to tell, since so much, apparently, depends upon the frame of mind of the so-called group of insurgents who for several days past, now, have been vigorously attacking the "Hamilton County gang," and its candidate, Arthur Hamilton of Lebanon.

The "insurgent" candidate was Representative Charles H. Jones of Jackson, who confidently claimed "enough votes to win." Hamilton, however, declared that he had definite pledges of support from forty-six or forty-seven of the seventy G. O. P. house members.

And to complicate the situation, Representative Earle L. Johnson, who flew down by airplane to attend the caucus, predicted that he was "going to win," stating that he has more than twenty votes definitely pledged. This situation, consequently, gave rise to furrowed brows and a wonder as to how many votes can be gotten out of seventy.

Besides choosing a speaker, the caucus was faced with selecting a majority floor leader—a position which usually goes to the "runner-up" in the speakership contest, but which none of the speakership candidates said they wanted—a clerk and a sergeant-at-arms.

Representatives Horace S. Keifer of Springfield, and William Weir of Warren, were active candidates for floor leader. Johnson, it was indicated, was also a possibility.

Captain John P. Maynard of Lima, and Dr. Alfred Robinson of Ironton, were slated for retention as house clerk and sergeant-at-arms, respectively, it was indicated.

The caucus session was called for two o'clock with Representative Fred J. Bing of Sandusky, ranking G. O. P. house member, presiding. A majority of at least thirty-six votes was required for a choice.

Representative Jones and his supporters among them R. D. Williamson of Xenia, early this week announced their hope of ridding the Republican party in Ohio of the alleged domination of "bosses" and thwarting the efforts of lobbyists to control the legislature. Among the charges of the "insurgents" was that a coalition of "boss-lobbyists," by the state commerce director, Ed D. Schorr of Cincinnati, were seeking to have Hamilton elected speaker.

EGGS HIT BOTTOM IN PRESENT MARKET

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 9.—A new low price for eggs in December prevailed in Cincinnati today. The present price is the lowest here for more than thirty years.

Top grade was further reduced two cents to thirty-three cents per dozen, wholesale, on the mercantile exchange. (This quotation is twenty-cents below that of a year ago.)

Dealers attributed the unusually low value of eggs to a heavy surplus of storage stocks, excessive receipts of fresh laid eggs and weaker conditions at other principal markets.

RIOTS OCCUR AT OPENING OF SEJM

WARSAW, Dec. 9.—Riotous scenes occurred today at the opening session of the newly-elected Polish Sejm, or lower house of parliament.

Communist members interrupted the proceedings frequently. After several ineffectual attempts had been made to call the session to order, the demonstrators were ejected forcibly from the chamber.

PLAN ADDITIONS

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 9.—Plans were completed today for additions and improvements to buildings at Ohio State University here. Contracts for the work, costing more than $100,000, were approved Monday by the university board of trustees.

Case Of Disorderly Conduct Will Be Heard Friday; Friends Rally To Jurist; Lindsey Jokes About Cleric

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—Bishop William T. Manning was under subpoena call today for his appearance Friday in West Side Court in connection with the disorderly conduct charge against former Judge Ben B. Lindsey of Denver, militant advocate of companionate marriage.

Announcement of the service late yesterday was made by Arthur Garfield Hays, counsel for Lindsey.

Lindsey, earlier in the day, was granted adjournment until Friday of hearing of the charge that resulted from his attempt Sunday in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine to answer Bishop Manning's attack against him and his theories of companionate marriage.

Hays also announced that he was considering bringing a personal suit against Bishop Manning in Lindsey's behalf.

Seven subpoenas were obtained by Patrolman William F. May who placed Lindsey under arrest Sunday. Since Bishop Manning refused himself to make a disorderly conduct charge against Lindsey, Patrolman May became the prosecuting witness. He said he would serve the seven subpoenas on ushers of the church who were said to have aided in ejecting Lindsey.

West side court was crowded when Lindsey entered. He was accompanied by George Creel and Wainwright Evans, writers, and his counsel. The formal charge against Lindsey read:

"In the Cathedral of St. John the Divine the defendant created a disturbance and acted in a boisterous manner and had to be removed from the church."

After the charge had been read Hays entered a formal plea of not guilty and asked for adjournment. Patrolman May objected. Hays argued, however, that he wanted more time to prepare his defense and the court finally granted the adjournment.

Lindsey, before leaving for a speaking engagement in Reading, Pa., made public a telegram he had received from Owen Moore, actor, and J. Percival Gerson, physician to Mrs. Lindsey, in Los Angeles. The telegram read:

"We and the rest of your admirers are solidly behind you in your righteous protest. It would be an indictment of intelligence in general and our time particular if such stupendous effrontery under the guise of religion should be allowed to go unchallenged. We glory with you in the great contribution of yourself and Mrs. Lindsey toward human amelioration and betterment. Our belief, love and friendship are with you. A telegram has been sent to Mayor Walker."

Hays said that his defense of the case against Lindsey will be that a church is a public place and that a man has the right to rise and defend himself in it if he feels that his character is being attacked, or his views presented unjustly.

READING, Pa., Dec. 9.—Abolishment of the divorce courts and the establishment of a commission of scientists, doctors, and psychiatrists to handle marital troubles was advocated by former Judge Ben Lindsey, of Denver, during his address to an audience of 2,000 here under the auspices of the woman's club.

The ex-jurist made numerous references, most of them humorous, to his clash with Bishop Manning in New York City. "I am sorry for the Bishop," he said. "I wish he would smile some times. He is a very much harassed man."

Discussing the divorce and domestic problems of marital life, Lindsey said:

"There is no scientific approach to divorce. I would like to see the divorce courts in this country abolished entirely. I would like to see them supplanted by a commission of doctors, scientists and psychiatrists to handle domestic and marital problems just as a medical case would be handled in a doctor's office."

A second bomb, the fourth in forty-eight hours, exploded in the front entrance of a west side butcher shop at approximately the same hour as the furniture mart blast. The damage here was estimated at $500.

Tony May, known as the "millionaire newsboy" died yesterday from injuries received when a bomb sent through the mails exploded in his home Sunday while he and 15 year old son, Eugene, were opening it. The boy was seriously injured.

Beck said the average person has not yet grasped the methods of taxation, particularly the income tax. He said residents of many states have good reasons for complaint, especially those in this city, for their part in helping to defray the expenses of the country.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 9.—The tendency of Americans to do things at high speed is responsible for most cases of high blood pressure which afflicts middle-aged Americans, according to Dr. David Reisman, professor of medicine at the University of Pennsylvania, who spoke before the Columbus Academy of Medicine here last night.

"America needs more loafers," Dr. Reisman declared in offering a panacea for the increase of high blood pressure.

"Americans," he said, "should cultivate the European's point of view. Meals now hurriedly gulped should be eaten leisurely and in pleasant atmospheres."

TWELVE SAILORS DIE WHEN EXPLOSION IN HULK WRECKS VESSEL

GIRL IS KIDNAPED

Here is Helen Louise Hamilton, 13-year-old Stockwell, Ind., school girl, who was kidnapped from her home by bandits and later released in Chicago. The bandits entered her home, tied up her parents and declared their intention of robbing the Stockwell bank, of which the girl's father is cashier, when Helen's sister climbed out of a second story window and notified police. The bandits became alarmed and fled, taking Helen with them.

TWO BOMBINGS CHALLENGE TO CHICAGO COPS

New Furniture Mart Damaged $15,000 By Explosion

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—Two more mysterious bombings, one of which did $15,000 damage to the American furniture mart, one of the world's largest buildings, challenged authorities today in their drive to check the outrages.

A powerful charge of dynamite exploded at the entrance of the new furniture mart building last night, blowing in doors and iron gratings and shattering every window in the first five stories of that side of the structure.

Structural steel work and the terra cotta surfacing about the entrance was badly damaged and weakened. One stairway was wrecked by the explosion's force. The damage was estimated to be in excess of $15,000.

Police believe the dynamite was lighted and thrown from a passing automobile. Bomb squad experts could find no motive for the bombing.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 9.—Three assassins today shot and killed Detective Hagedinsky, who gained wide fame when he uncovered a vast Soviet espionage system recently.

The slaying occurred on the street here.

In his dying statement M. Hagedinsky accused M. Jolankow, one of the chief Soviet figures in the espionage developments, of being one of his assassins.

Jolankow was immediately placed under arrest.

FOG AGAIN HAMPERSTRAFFIC IN LONDON

LONDON, Dec. 9.—The worst fog experienced here this winter hampered London traffic for several hours today, although it did not interfere seriously with shipping on the Thames.

The thick mist forced King George to forego a grouse shoot he had planned in Windsor great park for the first time since his illness two years ago.

Gun Cotton Under Sea Since War Causes Tragedy

LA PALAIS, Belle Isle, France, Dec. 9.—Incensed in their massive steel suits, the bodies of two divers were recovered today from the wreckage of the Italian salvage steamer Artiglio, which was blown out of the water and sank in the Bay of Biscay with the loss of twelve men.

The remaining seven members of her crew were rescued by another salvage ship in the near vicinity, but four of these were rushed to the hospital in serious condition.

Explosion of tons of gun cotton stored in the holds of the cargo ship Florence, sent to the bottom during the world war and since then a direct menace to shipping at its depth of 100 feet, was the cause of the tragedy.

The Artiglio, manned by a crew of intrepid seamen, had been occupied some months in an attempt to salvage $5,000,000 in gold ingots aboard the British steamer Egypt, which sank off Belle Isle in 1922 with the loss of eighty-nine lives.

Adverse weather caused temporary postponement of the project, whereupon the French ministry of marine chartered the Artiglio to blow up the munitions wreck.

The same pair of divers who located the Egypt were sent down to locate the Florence exactly and place mines for its destruction. The mines were lowered for explosion from a safe distance, but it is believed one of them blew up prematurely.

THREE KILLED IN PLANE FALL

Woman Among Air Crash Victims

SHANGHAI, Dec. 9.—Paul Baer, veteran American air pilot and former member of the famed Lafayette escadrille, was killed today with his Chinese co-pilot and a Russian woman passenger when their amphibian west-bound airplane struck a junk mast and crashed into Whangpoo River here.

Four prominent military men, passengers of the plane, were seriously injured.

Baer, whose home is in Fort Wayne, Ind., was 30-years-old. He was credited with having brought down eight German planes during the war.

The injured included General Hsiung Shih-Hui, commander of the Shanghai and Woosung garrison, and three members of his staff.

AMERICANS UNABLE TO CONCENTRATE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Americans are losing their power of concentration on any one subject because too much enter their minds in a short period of time through the medium of newspapers and moving pictures, Rep. Beck (R) Pennsylvania, told the Oldest Inhabitant Association last night at its sixth anniversary dinner.

Beck said the average person has not yet grasped the methods of taxation, particularly the income tax. He said residents of many states have good reasons for complaint, especially those in this city, for their part in helping to defray the expenses of the country.

FAMED "PADRE OF RAINS" DIES

FATHER RICARD

SAN JOSE, Calif., Dec. 9.—Father Jerome Sixtus Ricard, internationally famous scientist known as the "Padre of the Rains," who died here last night, will be buried from the old Mission Church on Santa Clara University's campus Thursday morning. It was announced today.

Father Ricard was stricken with his last illness in January, suffering a relapse ten days ago from which he failed to recover. He died quietly in the university infirmary last night. He was 80 years old.

WOMAN FACING LIFE IMPRISONMENT FOR SLAYING DAUGHTER

Mrs. O'Laughlin Is Convicted by Jury In Denver

DENVER, Colo., Dec. 9.—Mrs. Pearl O'Laughlin today faced the prospect of life imprisonment after a jury in district court last night found her guilty of murdering her 10-year-old step-child Leona.

After deliberating one hour and thirty-five minutes the jurors returned a verdict of first degree murder and Mrs. O'Laughlin was given a life term in prison.

The comely young wife received the jury's verdict with little show of emotion and walked from the court room back to her cell unassisted.

Mrs. O'Laughlin's attorney, John M. Keating, was given thirty days in which to prepare a motion for a new trial.

The child's body was found in a lagoon in City Park October 17. Analysis of the vital organs disclosed that the girl had consumed ground glass with her food, thus causing her death. The prosecution charged that Mrs. O'Laughlin had placed the glass in food she had served the family.

Her husband, a Denver detective, was taken Mrs. O'Laughlin and prosecutors charged that he too was suffering from ground glass.

DETECTIVE IS ASSASSINATED

GALATAZ, Roumania, Dec. 9.—Three assassins today shot and killed Detective Hagedinsky, who gained wide fame when he uncovered a vast Soviet espionage system recently.

The slaying occurred on the street here.

In his dying statement M. Hagedinsky accused M. Jolankow, one of the chief Soviet figures in the espionage developments, of being one of his assassins.

Jolankow was immediately placed under arrest.

TURBULENT CAUCUS EXPECTED IN FIGHT FOR HOUSE SPEAKER

Three Candidates In Field; Williamson Backs Jones

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 9.—Although party leaders scouted the possibility of any "bolting," a turbulent session was generally expected today as Republican members of the state house of representatives prepared to caucus this afternoon and decide wherein and upon whom shall be placed the control of the body.

Three candidates are in the field for selection to the speakership of the house. Each claimed sufficient support to win, but which way the wind was actually blowing was difficult to tell, since so much, apparently, depends upon the frame of mind of the so-called group of insurgents who for several days past, now, have been vigorously attacking the "Hamilton County gang," and its candidate, Arthur Hamilton of Lebanon.

The "insurgent" candidate was Representative Charles H. Jones of Jackson, who confidently claimed "enough votes to win." Hamilton, however, declared that he had definite pledges of support from forty-six or forty-seven of the seventy G. O. P. house members.

And to complicate the situation, Representative Earle L. Johnson, who flew down by airplane to attend the caucus, predicted that he was "going to win," stating that he has more than twenty votes definitely pledged. This situation, consequently, gave rise to furrowed brows and a wonder as to how many votes can be gotten out of seventy.

Besides choosing a speaker, the caucus was faced with selecting a majority floor leader—a position which usually goes to the "runner up" in the speakership contest, but which none of the speakership candidates said they wanted—a clerk and a sergeant-at-arms.

Representatives Horace S. Keifer of Springfield, and William Weir of Warren, were active candidates for floor leader. Johnson, it was indicated, was also a possibility.

Captain John P. Maynard of Lima, and Dr. Alfred Robinson of Ironton, were slated for retention as house clerk and sergeant-at-arms, respectively, it was indicated.

The caucus session was called for two o'clock with Representative Fred J. Bing of Sandusky, ranking G. O. P. house member, presiding. A majority of at least thirty-six votes was required for a choice.

Representative Jones and his supporters, among them R. D. Williamson of Xenia, early this week announced their hope of riding the Republican party in Ohio of the alleged domination of "Bosses" and thwarting the efforts of lobbyists to control the legislature. Among the charges of the "insurgents" was that a coalition of "boss-legislators," by the state commerce director, Ed D. Schorr of Cincinnati, was seeking to have Hamilton elected speaker.

EGGS HIT BOTTOM IN PRESENT MARKET

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 9.—A new low price for eggs in December prevailed in Cincinnati today. The present price is the lowest here for more than thirty years.

Top grade was further reduced two cents to thirty-three cents per dozen, wholesale, on the mercantile exchange. (This quotation is twenty-cents below that of a year ago.)

Dealers attributed the unusually low value of eggs to a heavy surplus of storage stocks, excessive receipts of fresh laid eggs and weaker conditions at other principal markets.

RIOTS OCCUR AT OPENING OF SEJM

WARSAW, Dec. 9.—Riotous scenes occurred today at the opening session of the newly-elected Polish Sejm, or lower house of parliament.

Communist members interrupted the proceedings frequently. After several ineffectual attempts had been made to call the session to order, the demonstrators were ejected forcibly from the chamber.

TRACE STOLEN AUTO
TO WASHINGTON C. H.

Miss Lena Bales, bookkeeper for the Ohio Association of Retail Lumber Dealers, reported to police Friday afternoon that her Ford coupe, 1930 model, bearing license number D8L-467 had been stolen from its parking place near the Buckeye Press, Market and Green Sts., that afternoon.

Officials of the Greene County Auto Club, who are co-operating with police in efforts to trace the car, were subsequently notified by Washington C. H., police that two young men, riding in an auto bearing license plates corresponding with those on Miss Bales' machine, were being sought for passing a forged check for $10 on a filling station in that city. The check on a Washington bank was made payable to "W. H. Wilson" and was indorsed with the name "Bush." Two suspects were also taken into custody at Portsmouth, O., for questioning.

COMMUNITY CHEST
FACING FAILURE

With Xenia's third annual campaign to raise $10,000 for 1931 Community Fund verging upon failure unless citizens of the city rise to the emergency, the corps of volunteer chest workers went into the field Tuesday afternoon determined more than ever to interview every possible prospect who so far has not been solicited.

The fund now stands at $7,788.55 which is still $2,211.45 short of the quota being sought. Monday's report totaled only $288.55 but every little bit helps, leaders point out. Chest workers held a special meeting at chest headquarters Monday night and it was agreed to

UTHER LEAGUE MEMBERS OLD CHRISTMAS PARTY.

Members of the Luther League of the First Lutheran Church held a Christmas party in the Sunday school rooms of the church Monday evening. The program opened with members singing Christmas carols and a Scripture reading followed. Two poems were read by Mr. Harold Snyder and Miss Phyllis Mella. The Christmas story was read by Ralph Nichols. Miss Katherine Maxwell played a violin solo accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Homer T. Gratz.

A short business meeting was held and two new members were received into the organization. Plans were made for members to go to Springfield to visit the Luther League of the Fifth Lutheran Church next Sunday evening.

Members brought gifts to the meeting and these will be distributed to needy children of the city at Christmas. Later games and contests were enjoyed. A refreshment course was served the thirty-four members and guests present.

PHI DELTS ENTERTAIN AT DINNER MONDAY
Members of Ohio Beta Beta Chapter, Phi Delta Kappa fraternity, were hosts Monday evening at a dinner in the chapter rooms, Kingsbury Bldg. Guests at the affair were parents of members, their wives and friends. A roast of turkey was served the sixty guests and later several tables of bridge were in play.

Mr. Charles Rhoenhardt, Dayton, national Phi Delta officer, was a guest at the dinner and gave a short talk, giving a history of the Phi Delta organization. A group picture of the guests was taken.

Plans were discussed at a short business meeting for the dance which the chapter is sponsoring Friday evening from 9 until 1 a.m. at the "Club Club." The band music will be furnished by the Selma, Yellow Springs, and its orchestra.

SOCIAL EVENING IS PLANNED BY LODGE
An entertaining program will be presented when members of Ivanhoe Lodge, No. 56, K. of P., entertain Wednesday evening in honor of new members recently received from Amicus Lodge, Paintersville. The program will start at 7:30 o'clock and will include readings, songs, comedy sketches, dancing, cards and music by old-time fiddlers. Later refreshments will be served. There will be no admission charge and all members and their families are invited to attend.

The committee in charge is composed of the following members: the Messrs. William Harrison, chairman; Sherman Robinson, Forest Grandin, C. V. Hampton and Bernard Steele.

S. S. CLASS HAS CHRISTMAS PARTY
A box of toys to be sent to the "Orphans' Home of the Reformed Church at Fort Wayne, Ind., for Christmas, was packed at a meeting of the Women's Bible Class of the First Reformed Church at the home of Miss Laura Marshall, W. Main St., Monday evening.

The meeting was in the nature of a Christmas party and opened with devotion led by Mrs. Charles Weiss. Miss Katherine Fittz, Yellow Springs, gave several readings and Mrs. James Hawkins sang a solo. A delicious refreshment course was served the thirty guests by members of the first division.

The names of the Misses Marjorie Weddle and Marjorie Harner were added Tuesday to the list of withdrawals from the "Miss Xenia" popularity contest being sponsored by the Xenia Elks' Lodge in connection with its charity fair and Santa Claus festival.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Hayes Hamilton left this week for Hamilton, Bermuda, where they expect to spend the winter.

Mrs. Paul Bexheimer, Somerset, Ky., is the guest this week of Mr. and Mrs. Chalmers W. Murphy, N. King St.

Mrs. Elizabeth Bottorff, who underwent a serious operation at McClellan Hospital several weeks ago is now recuperating at the home of her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Bottorff, N. King St.

Members of Miss Elsie Canby's Sunday School Class of the First M. E. Church will hold their pre-Christmas meeting at the home of Miss Helen Ford, S. Detroit St., Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. Each member attending is asked to bring a toy, canned food and discarded clothing.

Mrs. G. F. Mallow, who is seriously ill at her home on the Wilmington Pike, remains in about the same condition.

Mrs. Nelson Stretcher, Clifton, underwent an operation for the removal of her tonsils at the office of a Springfield physician Tuesday morning.

The third demonstration meeting on "Home Care of the Sick" for Silvercreek Twp., will be held Friday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the Grange Hall, Jamestown. Miss Lelia Bullock and Mrs. G. M. Barnett are leaders. All women in the community are invited to attend.

Mrs. Aletha Rule, of Marion Junction, Ala., arrived in Xenia last week to spend several weeks here with her sister, Mrs. Flora Alexander, Sheridan Drive.

Members of St. Agnes Guild of Christ Episcopal Church will hold their regular meeting Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of Mrs. I. S. Dines, W. Third St. A good attendance of members is desired at the meeting.

The W. H. O. Class of the United Brethren Church will meet in the church dormitory Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. All members are urged to be present.

Gifts were brought by each member to be distributed to the needy children of the city at Christmas time. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses later in the evening.

CENTRAL TRUST CO. ACQUIRES BANKS

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 8.—Two banks, bought by the Cincinnati Clearing House Association, a corporation when they were threatened by heavy "runs" because of an epidemic of bank failures in Kentucky, opened today as branches of the Central Trust Co. The banks were formerly the Pearl Market Bank and Trust Co., and the Brighton Bank and Trust Co.

The Central Trust Co. took over the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks Bank last July when that institution was forced to suspend operations as a result of the failure of the Cosmopolitan Bank. The deal, completed Saturday night, makes the Central Trust the second largest institution of its kind in the city.

LANG FALCONS TO OPEN SEASON AGAINST FLYERS WEDNESDAY

The Lang Chevrolet Falcons, Xenia's own pro basketball quintet, with a record of two victories in as many starts on foreign floors this season, will play their first home game in the National Guard armory floor here Wednesday night, meeting the Wright Flyers, a powerful court combination from Dayton. The game will get under way at 8:30 o'clock and will be preceded by a preliminary at 7:30.

The Falcons hold victories over Harmon Hall of Lebanon and Wilmington College and hope to continue their winning ways in their local debut before a home crowd. The probably starting lineup for the Flyers includes Freddy Schauer captain and floor guard, who formerly played with Osborn High School and more recently with the Wilbur Wright Field Collegians; Florrie Williams, guard, an ex-Dayton Stivers star; "Red" Jones, center, also a former Stivers luminary; Bushmeyer, forward former Wittenberg College courtster, and Bill Miller, a product of Tippicanoe City.

The Falcons will start their customary lineup with Bill LeSourd and "Pinky" Wilson teaming at forwards, "Bulldog" Smith at the center station, and the Putnam brothers, Nolen and Marvin, at guards.

The preliminary contest will be between the "Famous Five," another newly organized Xenia team, and the Krippendorf-Dittmann Shoe Co. quintet. Freddie McCarran, Bill Clemans, Eddie Higgins, Bob Finlay, "Polly" Parrett, "Speed" Leopard, Bob Killen and others will perform for the "Famous Five."

UTHER LEAGUE MEMBERS OLD CHRISTMAS PARTY.

Members of the Luther League of the First Lutheran Church held Christmas party in the Sunday school rooms of the church Monday evening. The program opened with members singing Christmas carols and a Scripture reading followed. Two poems were read by Mr. Harold Snyder and Miss Phyllis Mellage. The Christmas story as read by Ralph Nichols. Miss Christine Maxwell played a violin solo accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Homer T. Graetz. A short business meeting was held and two new members were received into the organization. Plans were made for members to go to Springfield to visit the Luther League of the Fifth Lutheran church next Sunday evening. Members brought gifts to the meeting and these will be distributed to needy children of the city at Christmas time. Delicious refreshments were enjoyed. A refreshment course was served the thirty-four members and guests present.

PHI DELTA ENTERTAIN AT DINNER MONDAY

Members of Ohio Beta Beta Chapter, Phi Delta Kappa fraternity, were hosts Monday evening at a dinner in the chapter rooms, Kingsbury Bldg. Guests at the affair were parents of members, their wives and friends. A roast of turkey was served the sixty guests and later several tables of bridge were in play.

Mr. Charles Rheinhildt, Dayton, national Phi Delta officer, was a guest at the dinner and gave a short talk, giving a history of the Phi Delta organization. A group picture of the guests was taken. Plans were discussed at a short business meeting for the dance which the chapter is sponsoring Friday evening from 9 until 1 o'clock at the Elks' Club. The band and music will be furnished by the Selma, Yellow Springs, and its orchestra.

SOCIAL EVENING IS PLANNED BY LODGE

An entertaining program will be presented when members of Ivanhoe Lodge, No. 56, K. of P., entertain Wednesday evening in honor of new members recently received from Amicus Lodge, Paintersville. The program will start at 7:30 o'clock and will include readings, songs, comedy sketches, dancing, cards and music by old-time fiddlers. Later refreshments will be served. There will be no admission charge and all members and their families are invited to attend.

The committee in charge is composed of the following members: the Messrs. William Harrison, chairman; Sherman Robinson, Forrest Grandin, C. V. Hampton and Bernard Steele.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Nevertheless, whereto we have already attained, let us walk by the same rule, let us mind the same thing. Brethren, be followers together of me, and mark them which walk so as ye have for example.—Philippians, iii, 16, 17.

THE FUTURE RESEARCH

Charles P. Steinmetz recognized by the General Electric Company as the world's foremost electrical engineer in answer to the question "What line of research will see the greatest development in the near future?" is reported to have replied as follows:

"In my judgment the greatest discovery will be made along spiritual lines. Here is a force which history clearly teaches has been the greatest power in the development of men and history. Yet we have been merely playing with it, and have never seriously studied it as we have the physical forces."

"Some day the people will learn that material things do not bring happiness and are of little use in making men and women creative and powerful. Then the scientists of the world will turn their laboratories over to the study of God's word and prayer and spiritual forces which as yet have scarcely been scratched. When this day comes the world will see more advancement in one generation than it has seen in the past four generations."

WAYS OF THE STUDENTS

When the students come back from the colleges and schools, one gets some idea of modern habits. One of them remarks that in her dormitory, the girls sit up until about midnight right along. They apparently study until about 10, and then the next two hours go into social visiting from room to room. Apparently things go much the same in the boys' colleges.

Students of college age are supposed to be grown up. The authorities do not consider it their business to perform the functions of parents or nurses. The young people are independent, and do not take kindly to advice. They love the later hours of the evening. Life grows more fascinating as the clock strikes midnight.

Yet probably those youngsters have to get up at seven o'clock in the morning, which leaves a short night for sleep. The home folks worry to see their pale faces when they come back, and deplore the forcing processes of modern education and too hard study. But that is not probably the trouble.

Another habit of these youngsters, is the dislike that many of them have to carrying umbrellas and wearing rubber overshoes. They remark that they would rather get their feet wet than wear the rubbers. The girls usually have very pretty shoes that are obscured when they protect their feet against rain. They may be so hardened physically that they do not need to protect themselves, and then again they may not.

Also they remark that if caught in a heavy shower, they can always take a taxi. Little things like taxi fares do not worry them. They have large and weighty things on their minds, and they can not burden themselves with the care of an umbrella. But if some of them catch severe colds, the cautious prudence of the older folks may look a little better.

The proper way to get at Old Man Depression is to run in and tackle him around the knees.

Happily the Prince of Wales did not have a fall while steering the DO-X.

Sometimes a person with a grievance gets relief by talking about it, but he imposes cruel and unusual punishment on the listener.

It might be well to quit studying criminals for a while and study how to suppress them.

WHO'S THE BOSS?

I heard a husky husband boasting: "I'll tell you one thing—I'm the Boss in MY house. Somebody has to be the head of the house and I'm IT. What I say goes! I'm the Boss!"

Maybe so, I don't know the family. I don't know the wife. I don't even know that Stout Fellow who was telling the world he was the Boss. I'm not arguing—I'm just remembering, that's all.

I'm remembering the time I went to a zoo and stood in front of the Lion Cage, watching a family of lions. One was a Magnificent Male, proud, strong, arrogantly calm. Another was a half-grown cub, smaller, out beautiful, promising great strength later on. The third was a female, a long, sinewy creature, who lay in a corner, calmly looking us over. She looked at us, we looked, the Male rose to his feet and stretched every muscle in his mighty structure and yawned a red, tremendous yawn and strode across the cage and through a little door into a dark sleeping chamber. He didn't say good-bye, he merely went—and the family didn't seem to mind his going.

And then, through that dark door, thunder broke. It rushed forth like mad, with thundering hooves. It filled the sky and echoed from the hills. It clattered and demanded. It said, so plainly that even a human being could understand it, "Come here!" The Magnificent Male was ordering his wife to obey him.

Did she move? Did she stir a muscle? Was she upset? Not a bit. She lay there as calm as the Sphinx of Egypt. . . . He roared again. He raised the roof. There was lightning in his rage. . . . She stayed where she was. . . . Again he bellowed. Again he made the heavens tremble in the storm of his commands. . . . She did not move. . . . And again and again he showed us who was Boss in the Family. But this time I thought I heard a pleading, a faint tremble in his gigantic rage. . . . And then the lady rose to her feet.

Without haste, with a slow and measured pace, she strode across the Lion Cage, moving with easy and undisturbed grace. And as she entered the dark door she asked, I suppose, "What is it, Dear?"—and the roaring ceased. . . .

The Boss of the House had proved once more that HE was the master, that his wife jumped whenever he gave commands. . . . But the crowd laughed at that domestic scene. The crowd of men and women knew who was Boss—and the men looked sheepish and the women looked quietly proud. They'd all heard that pleading in the Lion's roar.

So you can remember that scene in the Lion Cage the next time you hear a He-Man boasting that he's in command. . . . I guess WE know who's the Boss, all right. He doesn't need to be telling us.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALE

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.—A Madison Avenue chemist has been putting up a brave fight against the New Order of Things. He has refused to turn his place of business into a sublimated five-and-ten-cent-store. You couldn't buy cheap fiction there, gum drops, gents' neckwear, ice cream or glue. He had no soda fountain, with boys in white jackets dispensing sandwiches and coffee.

I passed his place the other day. To let him gleamed through the murky windows. There was no room for a shop of that kind. You can't feed olives to cows.

FAR FROM PERFECT

The average radio announcer is not as good as he thinks he is. He couldn't be. Nothing human can scale that dizzy peak of perfection.

He is particularly offensive when he pronounces the names of Italian, French and German music composers. I have heard Beethoven, Bach, Mendelssohn and Mozart announced in a manner that made me feel I'd like to shoot the next man who mentioned their names.

Pretty soon, some day, these birds will learn that the ordinary, every-day American pronunciation is, after all, the best. When they pull the other stuff they're trotting out a line of goods that carries no appeal.

Simplicity is the ogal upon which the eyes of every artist should be trained. And it makes no difference whether the artist be painting pictures, scribbling music scores, announcing a radio broadcast or selling fertilizer for rose bushes.

GET A DICTIONARY
Ted Husing, the announcer, understands football and broadcasts a game with discrimination and intelligence. But once in awhile he slips. Ted is hampered by a plebeian love for long words.

Describing one of the plays in the recent Notre Dame-Army game he said:

"The crowd evidently didn't like that, for they are ejaculating their expostulatory comment."

BAITING THE BULL

Once upon a time the papers used to refer to Al Capone as "Scarface Al."

They've dropped the "Scarface." The worthy Brother let it be known that he didn't cherish the sobriquet. That scar has unique significance in Al's set.

Capone being perhaps the most powerful man in America today, his wishes with respect to "Scarface" are being respected.

Let's revive it again for the heliofit.

Remember the rabbit that spit in the bulldog's face?

Muscle Shoals Question

By NICHOLAS LONGWORTH
Speaker, House of Representatives
(Nicholas Longworth was born at Cincinnati, O., Nov. 5, 1869. He is a graduate of Harvard, later having studied law there and at Cincinnati Law school. He holds honorary degrees from three other universities. From 1899 to 1901 he was a member of the Ohio house of representatives, and the state senate the next two years. He was elected to congress in 1903 from the first Ohio district, and has served continuously since except from 1913 to 1915. A Republican, he has been speaker of the house since 1925.)

Generally speaking, the purpose is to put ahead the anti appropriation bills so as to prevent any excuse for an extra session of congress. The formulation of the appropriation bills is in very good shape. It is possible that three of these annual supply measures will pass the house before the holiday recess.

I am wholly opposed to an extra session of congress. I think the slow recovery of business is largely due to the prolonged extra session of this congress and another extra session would only retard business recovery.

There are two outstanding matters to be settled. One of these is the settlement of the problem of Muscle Shoals; the other is the so-called lame duck resolution.

We have expended a great deal of money, something like $450,000,000 I believe, on the Muscle Shoals plant. We have expended all that money, the plant is there and something should be done with it.

I never was in favor of the original Muscle Shoals legislation, but the money has been expended and the big government-owned plant is there awaiting action.

Regarding the lame duck proposal, I have never opposed its consideration by the house. There should be an amendment to the pending resolution to provide for a termination of the short session, as the terms as they now stand would leave both sessions intermediate, with the possibility of congress being in session through the two years.

If the house will put on an amendment to prescribe a terminating date for the second session, I am in favor of the lame duck resolution.

Unemployment legislation of a conservative and economic nature should be passed at this December session. Immigration, of course, is related to unemployment.

As to railroad legislation, I understand there is no agreement on that subject.

I do not want to discuss the World Court because that is a matter for the other branch of congress.

IT HAPPENS IN THE BEST OF FAMILIES

RITCHIE SEEN SECOND TO GOVERNOR ROOSEVELT AS DEMOCRATIC CHOICE

—CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland is second on the list of 1932's Democratic presidential possibilities just as unmistakably as Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York is at the top of it.

This means the list of today, subject to unlimited modifications. Even the strongest dries hardly will dispute that Governor Roosevelt looks most like 1932's Jeffersonian nominee. Maybe they will claim second place for the dry Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, but there would be no logic in that. If Joe is entitled to second place he is entitled to first, and he certainly isn't.

All rational calculations point to a wet Democratic choice two years hence. It was demonstrated in 1928 that a wet Democrat can obtain his party's nomination, no matter how extensively he may be bolted later. Thus we do know that the dry Democrats will yield somewhat. It is unimaginable that the northern wets will do so in 1932, in the light of what happened at the last congressional election.

Among the wets, Franklin Roosevelt automatically takes first place, by reason of his recent vast majority in so pivotal a state as New York.

Ritchie as automatically takes second. If there be any doubt about it, examine the roll of other possibilities to date. Senator Robinson, ex-Senator Jim Reed of Missouri, Owen D. Young, ex-Governor Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, Governor-elect George White of Ohio, his fellow Buckeye, Senator Robert Bulkley, Newton D. Baker, also of Ohio, and Senator-elect Cordell Hull of Tennessee—which of them is there to compare with the Marylander? None, obviously—at the present writing.

Although Governor Roosevelt is first on the Democratic list, he has not quite the clench that Al Smith appeared to have at this time preceding the 1928 convention, even allowing for the fact there was no certainty that the southern Democratic dry delegates would swallow Al.

That is to say, the enthusiasm for Al, on the part of those who did like him, was stronger than the enthusiasm now is for Franklin Roosevelt, or than there is any prospect that it can be developed into.

If I were Governor Ritchie, and wanted to be the Democratic presidential candidate in 1932, I would spend the next 18 months making just as many people acquainted with me in as many places as I could.

The Marylander started to do this sort of thing in advance of the Houston convention and was doing remarkably well at it when the trend took a direction so proudly in the direction of the then governor of New York that he deemed it, I suppose, undesirable to push his effort to the proportions of an actual campaign in his own behalf and dropped it altogether. I should think that all ways characterize him.

He unquestionably had been encouraged by politicians, who wished him none too well, to get out and introduce "himself" on the theory that he would say enough wrong things to talk his chances into oblivion in short order.

The governor was a great hit everywhere he went. He is one of the handsomest men in public life. He has the grand manner, but without any air of superiority or of condescension towards others.

He has brains and balance. His political record is perhaps the freest record of any man's who has been so long in politics, of doubtful, slippery compromises.

His excellences are too manifest not to be immediately apparent to any audience which he meets at close quarters.

In his previous effort to establish an entente with the country, however, there was one technical fault—his contacts were with insufficiently large circles. He accepted invitations to, and he adroitly, dressed gatherings of influential business and professional men, but he did not mix with enough of the hot polloi.

What Governor Ritchie needs is recognition by the average voter throughout the whole republic, as a concrete human entity.

I suppose it is hard for a Marylander to realize that his state can be classed by millions of Americans as an out-of-the-way spot on the map; he lives there and it does not seem out-of-the-way to him.

It is out-of-the-way, nevertheless. It is not on the beaten continental track, like Ohio, Illinois and even Kansas or Nebraska. It is not an important terminus, like California. Of course it is not a gravitation center for the entire nation, like New York.

Being governor of Maryland does not give Maryland's gubernatorial incumbent a national reputation, by itself alone.

Governor Ritchie's official position and record number of re-elections establish his prestige in his home state, in the District of Columbia and in near-by Virginia. They establish his prestige among politicians everywhere. But to the average Iowan, North Dakotan or Oklahoman, the governorship of Maryland does not mean much—as the governorship of New York does.

Second place is not so bad, on a list of presidential possibilities. The prospects of the Maryland governor require intensive and, at the same time, far-flung cultivation.

Then, if anything should occur to top the Democratic presidential list's top off, leaving him at the head of it, he will be able to stay there.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

—By MRS. MARY MORTON—

Spareribs and Sauerkraut
Baked Sweet Potatoes
Vegetable Salad
Chocolate Pudding
Tea

This is a typical cold weather meal. Sauerkraut has recently risen to the top as a health food, so those who like it may indulge freely.

Today's Recipes

Chocolate Pudding—One cup flour, two tablespoons cocoa, one-half teaspoon soda, one teaspoon cream of tartar, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-half cup sugar, one egg, one-half cup milk, one tablespoon melted butter. Sift dry ingredients together several times. Beat egg well. Add milk and cream. Stir into dry ingredients. Turn into a greased mold or individual molds and steam 30 or 40 minutes for individual molds and an hour for the larger size. The Sauce—One-fourth cup soft butter, two-thirds cup powdered sugar, one egg, well beaten; one-half cup cream, whipped; dash cinnamon, one-fourth teaspoon vanilla. Cream the butter, add sugar gradually. When well mixed add well-beaten egg and season with nutmeg and vanilla.

Christmas Gifts for Mother
Boudoir slippers, gloves, scarf, knitted jacket scarf, hose, lounging robe, books, book ends, vase in her favorite color, pocketbook, stationery with her name plate, good piece of jewelry, candlesticks, bowl and flower bulbs, writing case, tea set, fancy linens, pillow for her room, telephone extension upstairs, comfortable chair, handy table for her own use, lamp, tea wagon.

Metamorphosed Rocking Chair
I saw the rockers and part of the legs off an old rocking chair, also cut off the back and the arms down to the seat. This left the leather top and four short legs. Covering the seat with chintz, I now have a charming footstool to place before the fireplace," writes one housewife.

New Whipped Cream Flavor
Try putting crushed peanut brittle in your whipped cream for gingerbread or pumpkin pies. It will give a lovely new flavor.

NEW SALAD TO SERVE TO YOUR GUESTS
MAYFLOWER SALAD
(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe)—Cut watermelon pickles and pears in uniform cubes, having equal quantities of each. Arrange in lettuce nests and pour over a small amount of French dressing with a little of the pickle juice in it.

Experts Fail To Agree on Findings

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

In the article called "Dietary Facts, Fads and Fancies," in an authoritative medical journal, the author discusses the theories of the effect of meat and other protein foods on diseases of the kidneys and heart and blood pressure.

For test purposes animals have been fed on protein for long periods and then dissected to see if any kidney disease had developed. Or if any degenerative disease of the blood vessels or heart developed. The trouble is the observations do not agree. Seven different sets of scientists have found kidney disease after prolonged protein feeding. But six sets of equally eminent investigators fed the same kinds of animals the same kind of protein food for the same lengths of time and found no kidney disease or arterial degeneration as a result. "The subject," says my author, "is still open to speculation."

"In every affair of human life," to quote a Victorian moralist, "those who look for the good will see the good, and those who look for the evil will see the evil."

Or, in other words, if a fellow starts out to find kidney disease after eating meat he will find it. And if he is convinced beforehand that no disease is there he will overlook it.

In 1930 two investigators fed a healthy man on 338 grams of beef muscle and liver daily for six months. His blood pressure did not change. He developed changes in the urine consisting of albumin and an increase in the normal number of casts. But as the author I am quoting points out, this does not mean Bright's disease. Albumin and casts develop under many conditions—an ordinary tonsillitis will bring them on. Ten days after the man under observation discontinued ued the diet he was entirely normal. "Nature has fortunately endowed the human body with a large reserve of kidney function."

QUESTIONS FROM READERS
E. G.: "Will you advise where fuller information can be obtained as to the caloric content of more foods than are given in the casual tables we read?"
Answer: The United States government has published a monograph called "The Chemical Composition of American Food Materials," Bulletin 28, revised edition. It can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C.

P. R. S., New York. "Who are the best diet experts in America?"
Answer: There are a great many good ones. The "best" ones would be a matter of personal opinion. However, it would probably be fair to say that among the most distinguished there would be included by general agreement, Dr. Graham Lusk of New York, Dr. E. V. McCullum of Baltimore, Dr. J. C. Sherman of New York, Dr. J. S. Mclester of Birmingham, Ala.; Dr. Elliot Joslin of Boston, Dr. R. T. Woodruff of Chicago, and Dr. W. M. Marriott of St. Louis.

EDITOR'S NOTE: A new pamphlet, "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," by Dr. Clendenning, can be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin and a self-addressed, stamped envelope, to Dr. Logan Clendenning, in care of this paper, or Central Press Association, 1435 E. Twelfth street, Cleveland, O. The pamphlet on "Hygiene of Women" also is available for 10 cents.)

Keep Up Hope Until Man Marries

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am now 18, but four years ago I met and fell in love with a young fellow. I love him still. He is 22. We have the same hobbies, are both refined and quiet. Our opinions are usually the same.

"I think he loved me until the third party entered. Now I am forgotten—no, not exactly forgotten, but we don't go out together and our conversations are as brief as possible.

"This girl lives in our town. She is 20 and eloped not quite two years ago. Now she is applying for a divorce. She is the flapper type, is awfully pretty and has prettier clothes and a prettier home than I. She likes to be on the go all the time and I know she would not make him happy. She brags about getting him, and says she is going to marry him. He has not proposed yet. I know this to be true, as she told me herself.

"Above all things, I want him to be happy. I know she won't make him happy. To give him up to anyone would be hard, but to give him to someone who could make him happy would make me happy, too, but I want him for my own.

"Oh, Virginia Lee, is this true love or just selfishness? What shall I do? Can I get him back?"

"A Praying Maiden,"
Looks as if she had got what pretty well hooked, doesn't it, although it may be that she talks more confidently to you than she feels. She probably senses that you love him and she is the kind of gal that loves to triumph over a rival.

Of course it is really almost impossible to tell whether a certain couple will be happy if or when married or not. The very fact that this girl is so different from the boy may, and probably is, the reason she attracts him and may be an argument in favor of a happy marriage. They may be congenial although different.

However, if you are convinced that he will not be happy and you want to win him, there is no reason why you cannot try to make those conversations longer.

Eliminating Blemishes Is Difficult

By GLADYS GLAD

Although most unattractive skin conditions, barring actual skin diseases, will respond favorably to home remedies, the disfiguring little capillaries that sometimes appear on the cheeks and nose will not in the least be benefited by any amateur treatment.

These tiny, broken, capillaries may result from a variety of causes. The self-indulgent miss who gorges an excess of fats and sweets may find these blemishes present on her cheeks and nose. The athletic dandy who participates in the more strenuous sports of the winter and summer seasons, and fails to protect her skin from the rigors of the weather, also may find herself the possessor of this condition.

If the texture of your skin is very fine, and the skin itself is exceedingly thin, the use of hot and cold towels alternately on the face may produce these unsightly capillaries. The use of ice as an astringent, and the practice of squeezing out blackheads and pimples also may cause the appearance of the condition.

These blemishes may be rapidly and successfully eliminated by electrolysis. The work, of course, should be done by an expert only. Any attempt to cure the condition at home will prove ineffective, and may even render the "broken veins" more prominent.

A swelling of the nose or face, in addition to the appearance of the broken capillaries, is something else again. Ordinarily, it is a chronic rosacea, a definite skin disease that requires treatment by a physician or skin specialist.

The wise thing to do, of course, is to prevent these little broken capillaries from appearing. Avoid misleading your skin by squeezing blackheads and pimples, by using ice as an astringent, by applying hot and cold cloths alternately to your face. Simplify your diet, eliminating foods that stimulate the blood supply. And, if you participate in strenuous summer and winter sports, make sure that your skin is properly protected from the elements.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Egg Shampoo
Mrs. E. C. H.: You may use the egg shampoo on your daughter's hair with perfect safety. However, an occasional oil shampoo should be administered also.

Reducing
Boots: You should weigh about 116 pounds. My method of reducing is contained in detail in my booklet on "The New Figure." The process is too long to print here.

Hands
M. R. G.: An excellent solution for perspiring hands can be made of two drams of boric acid, three drams of borax, three drams of salicylic acid, three ounces of glycerine and three ounces of bay rum. Apply this solution three times a day.

EDITOR'S NOTE: While it is impossible for Miss Glad to answer possible questions by mail, she will be happy to send you her pamphlets on "The New Figure" and "Beauty Culture," if you will write her, care of this paper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope and 10 cents in coin, for each, to cover cost of printing and mailing. Personal questions on beauty will be answered through Miss Glad's daily column.

The Boss of the House had proved once more that HE was the master, that his wife jumped whenever he gave commands. . . . But the crowd laughed at that domestic scene. The crowd of men and women knew who was Boss—and the men looked sheepish and the women looked quietly proud. They'd all heard that pleading in the Lion's roar.

So you can remember that scene in the Lion Cage the next time you hear a He-Man boasting that he's in command. . . . I guess WE know who the Boss, all right. He doesn't need to be telling us.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.—A Madison Avenue chemist has been putting up a brave fight against the New Order of Things. He has refused to turn his place of business into a sublimated five-and-ten-cent-store. You couldn't buy cheap fiction there, gum drops, gents' neckwear, ice cream or glue.

He had no soda fountain, with boys in white jackets dispensing sandwiches and coffee. I passed his place the other day. To let bill gleamed through the murky windows. There was no room for a shop of that kind. You can't feed olives to cows.

FAR FROM PERFECT

The average radio announcer is not as good as he thinks he is. He couldn't be. Nothing human can scale that dizzy peak of perfection.

He is particularly offensive when he pronounces the names of Italian, French and German music composers. I have heard Beethoven, Bach, Mendelssohn and Mozart announced in a manner that made me feel I'd like to shoot the next man who mentioned their names.

Pretty soon, some day, these birds will learn that the ordinary, every-day American pronunciation is, after all, the best. When they pull the other stuff they're trotting out a line of goods that carries no appeal.

Simplicity is the goal upon which the eyes of every artist should be trained. And it makes no difference whether the artist be painting pictures, scribbling music scores, announcing a radio broadcast or selling fertilizer for rose bushes.

GET A DICTIONARY

Ted Husing, the announcer, understands football and broadcasts a game with discrimination and intelligence. But once in a while he slips. Ted is hampered by a plebeian love for long words.

Describing one of the plays in the recent Notre Dame-Army game he said: "The crowd evidently didn't like that, for they are ejaculating their expostulatory comment."

BAITING THE BULL

Once upon a time the papers used to refer to Al Capone as "Scarface Al."

They've dropped the "Scarface." The Worthy Brother let it be known that he didn't cherish the sobriquet. That scar has unique significance in Al's set.

Capone being perhaps the most powerful man in America today, his wishes with respect to "Scarface" are being respected.

Let's revive it again for the hell of it.

Remember the rabbit that spit in the bulldog's face?

Muscle Shoals Question

By NICHOLAS LONGWORTH
Speaker, House of Representatives
Nicholas Longworth was born at Cincinnati, O., Nov. 5, 1899. He is a graduate of Harvard, later having studied law there and at Cincinnati Law school. He holds honorary degrees from three other universities. From 1899 to 1901 he was a member of the Ohio house of representatives, and the state senate the next two years. He was elected to congress in 1903 from the first Ohio district, and has served continuously since except from 1913 to 1915. A Republican, he has been speaker of the house since 1925.

Generally speaking, the purpose is to pull ahead the annual appropriation bills so as to prevent any excuse for an extra session of congress. The formulation of the appropriation bills is in very good shape. It is possible that three of these annual supply measures will pass the house before the holiday recess.

I am wholly opposed to an extra session of congress. I think the slow recovery of business is largely due to the prolonged extra session of this congress and another extra session would only retard business recovery.

There are two outstanding matters to be settled. One of these is the settlement of the problem of Muscle Shoals; the other is the so-called lame duck resolution.

We have expended a great deal of money, something like $450,000,000 I believe, on the Muscle Shoals plant. We have expended all that money, the plant is there and something should be done with it.

I never was in favor of the original Muscle Shoals legislation, but the money has been expended and the big government-owned plant is there awaiting action.

Regarding the lame duck proposal, I have never opposed its consideration by the house. There should be an amendment to the pending resolution to provide for a termination of the short session, as the terms as they now stand would leave both sessions intermediate, with the possibility of congress being in session through the two years.

If the house will put on an amendment to prescribe a terminating date for the second session, I am in favor of the lame duck resolution.

Unemployment legislation of a conservative and economic nature should be passed at this December session. Immigration, of course, is related to unemployment.

As to railroad legislation, I understand there is no agreement on that subject.

I do not want to discuss the World Court because that is a matter for the other branch of congress.

RITCHIE SEEN SECOND TO GOVERNOR ROOSEVELT AS DEMOCRATIC CHOICE

—CHARLES P. STEWART—

WASHINGTON.—Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland is second on the list of 1932's Democratic presidential possibilities just as unmistakably as Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York is at the top of it.

This means the list of today, subject to unlimited modifications.

Even the strongest drys hardly will dispute that Governor Roosevelt looks most like 1932's Jeffersonian nominee. Maybe they will claim second place for the dry Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, but there would be no logic in that. If Joe is entitled to second place he is entitled to first, and he certainly isn't.

All rational calculations point to a wet Democratic choice two years hence. It was demonstrated in 1928 that a wet Democrat can obtain his party's nomination, no matter how extensively he may be bolted later. Thus we do know that the dry Democrats will yield somewhat. It is unimaginable that the northern wet will do so in 1932, in the light of what happened at the last congressional election.

Among the wets, Franklin Roosevelt automatically takes first place by reason of his recent vast majority in so pivotal a state as New York. Ritchie as automatically takes second. If there be any doubt about it, examine the roll of other possibilities to date. Senator Robinson, ex-Senator Jim Reed of Missouri, Owen D. Young, ex-Governor Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, Governor-elect George White of Ohio, his fellow Buckeye, Senator Robert Bulkley, Newton D. Baker, also of Ohio, and Senator-elect Cordell Hull of Tennessee—which of them there to compare with the Marylander? None, obviously—at the present writing.

Although Governor Roosevelt is first on the Democratic list, he has not quite the clench that Al Smith appeared to have at this time preceding the 1928 convention, even allowing for the fact there was no certainty that the southern Democratic dry delegates would swallow Al.

That is to say, the enthusiasm for Al, on the part of those who did like him, was stronger than the enthusiasm now is for Franklin Roosevelt, or that there is any prospect that it can be developed into.

If I were Governor Ritchie, and I wanted to be the Democratic presidential candidate in 1932, I would spend the next 18 months making just as many people acquainted with me in as many places as I could.

The Marylander started to do this a couple of years in advance of the Houston convention and was doing remarkably well at it when the trend took a direction so profoundly in the direction of the governor of New York that he deemed it, I suppose, undesirable to push his effort to the proportions of an actual campaign in his own behalf and dropped it altogether—an example of the good taste and good judgment which always characterize him.

He unquestionably had been encouraged by politicians who wished him none too well, to get out and introduce himself on the theory that he would say enough wrong things to talk his chances into oblivion in short order.

The governor was a great hit everywhere he went. He is one of the handsomest men in public life. He has the grand manner, but without any air of superiority or of condescension towards others.

He has brains and balance. His political record is perhaps the freest record of any man's who has been so long in politics, of doubtful, slippery compromises.

His excellences are too manifest not to be immediately apparent to any audience which he meets at close quarters.

In his previous effort to establish an entente with the country, however, there was one technical fault—his contacts were with insufficiently large circles. He accepted invitations to, and he addressed gatherings of influential business and professional men, but he did not mix with enough of the hot pot.

What Governor Ritchie needs is recognition by the average voter throughout the whole republic, as a concrete human entity.

I suppose it is hard for a Marylander to realize that his state can be classed by millions of Americans as an out-of-the-way spot on the map, he lives there and it does not seem out-of-the-way to him.

It is out-of-the-way, nevertheless. It is not on the beaten continental track, like Ohio, Illinois and even Kansas or Nebraska. It is not an important terminus, like California. Of course it is not a gravitation center for the entire nation, like New York.

Being governor of Maryland does not give Maryland's gubernatorial incumbent a national reputation, by itself alone.

Governor Ritchie's official position and record number of re-elections establish his prestige in his home state, in the District of Columbia and in near-by Virginia. They establish his prestige among politicians everywhere. But to the average Iowan, North Dakotan or Oklahoman, the governorship of Maryland does not mean much—as the governorship of New York does.

Second place is not so bad, on a list of presidential possibilities.

The prospects of the Maryland governor require intensive and, at the same time, far-flung cultivation.

Then, if anything should occur to lop the Democratic presidential list's top off, leaving him at the head of it, he will be able to stay there.

Sparassis and Sauerkraut
Baked Sweet Potatoes
Vegetable Salad
Chocolate Pudding
Tea

This is a typical cold weather meal. Sauerkraut has recently risen to the top as a health food, so those who like it may indulge freely.

Today's Recipes

Chocolate Pudding—One cup flour, two tablespoons cocoa, one-half teaspoon soda, one teaspoon cream of tartar, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-half cup sugar, one egg, one-half cup milk, one tablespoon melted butter. Sift dry ingredients together several times. Beat egg well. Add milk and melted butter. Stir into dry ingredients. Turn into a greased mold or individual molds and steam 30 or 40 minutes for individual molds and an hour for the larger size. The Sauce—One-fourth cup soft butter, two-thirds cup powdered sugar, one egg, well beaten; one-half cup cream, whipped; dash cinnamon, one-fourth teaspoon vanilla. Cream the butter, add sugar gradually. When well mixed add well-beaten egg and season with nutmeg and vanilla.

Christmas Gifts for Mother
Boudoir slippers, gloves, scarf, knitted jacket, scarf, hose, lounging robe, books, book ends, vase in her favorite color, pocketbook, stationery with her name plate, good piece of jewelry, candlesticks, bowl and flower bulbs, writing case, tea set, fancy linens, pillow for her room, telephone extension, comfortable chair, handy table for her own use, lamp, tea wagon.

Metamorphosed Rocking Chair
I saw the rockers and part of the legs off an old rocking chair, also cut off the back and the arms down to the seat. This left the leather top and four short legs. Covering the seat with chintz, I now have a charming footstool to place before the fireplace," writes one housewife.

New Whipped Cream Flavor
Try putting crushed peanut brittle in your whipped cream for gingerbread or pumpkin pies. It will give a lovely new flavor.

New SALAD TO SERVE TO YOUR GUESTS
MAYFLOWER SALAD
(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe)—Cut watermelon pickles and pears in uniform cubes, having equal quantities of each. Arrange in lettuce nests and pour over a small amount of French dressing with a little of the pickle juice in it.

Experts Fail To Agree on Findings

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

In the article called "Dietary Facts, Fads and Fancies," in an authoritative medical journal, the author discusses the theories of the effect of meat and other protein foods on diabetes of the kidneys and heart and blood pressure.

For test purposes animals have been fed on protein for long periods and then dissected to see if any kidney disease had developed. Or if any degenerative disease of the blood vessels or heart developed. The trouble is the observations do not agree. Seven different sets of scientists have found kidney diseases after prolonged protein feeding. But six sets of equally eminent investigators fed the same kind of animal for the same lengths of time and found no kidney disease or arterial degeneration as a result. "The subject," says my author, "is still open to speculation."

"In every affair of human life," to quote a Victorian moralist, "those who look for the good will see the good, and those who look for the evil will see the evil."

Or, in other words, if a fellow starts out to find kidney diseases after eating meat he will find it. And if he is convinced beforehand that no disease is there he will overlook it.

In 1930 two investigators fed a healthy man on 338 grams of beef muscle and liver daily for six months. His blood pressure did not change. He developed changes in the urine consisting of albumin and an increase in the normal number of casts. But as the author I am quoting points out, this does not mean Bright's disease. Albumin and casts develop under many conditions—an ordinary tonsillitis will bring them on. Ten days after the man under observation discontinued the diet he was entirely normal. "Nature has fortunately endowed the human body with a large reserve of kidney function."

QUESTIONS FROM READERS
E. G.: "Will you advise where fuller information can be obtained as to the caloric content of more foods than are given in the casual tables we read?"

Answer: The United States government has published a monograph called "The Chemical Composition of American Food Materials" Bulletin 28, revised edition. It can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C.

P. R. S., New York. "Who are the best diet experts in America?"

Answer: There are a great many good ones. The "best" ones would be a matter of personal opinion. However, it would probably be fair to say that among the most distinguished there would be included by general agreement, Dr. Graham Lusk of New York, Dr. E. V. McCullum of Baltimore, Dr. H. C. Sherman of New York, Dr. J. S. McCleary of Birmingham, Ala.; Dr. Elliot Joslin of Boston, Dr. R. T. Woodruff of Chicago, and Dr. W. M. Marriott of St. Louis.

EDITOR'S NOTE: A new pamphlet, "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," by Dr. Clendening, can be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin and a self-addressed, stamped envelope, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper, or Central Press Association, 1450 E. Twelfth street, Cleveland, O. The pamphlet on "Hygiene of Women" also is available for 10 cents.)

Keep Up Hope Until Man Marries

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am now 18, but four years ago I met and fell in love with a young fellow. I love him still. He is 22. We have the same hobbies, are both refined and quiet. Our opinions are usually the same."

"I think he loved me until the third party entered. Now I am forgotten—no, not exactly forgotten, but we don't go out together and our conversations are as brief as possible."

"This girl lives in our town. She is 20 and eloped not quite two years ago. Now she is applying for a divorce. She is the flapper type, is awfully pretty and has prettier clothes and a prettier home than I. She likes to be on the go all the time and I know she would not make him happy. She brags about getting him, and says she is going to marry him. He has not proposed yet. I know this to be true, as she told me herself."

Above all things, I want him to be happy. I know she won't make him happy. To give him up to anyone would be hard, but to give him to someone who could make him happy would make me happy, too, but I want him for my own."

Oh, Virginia Lee, is this true love or just selfishness? What shall I do? Can I get him back? "A Praying Maiden."

Looks as if she had got him pretty well hooked, doesn't it, although it may be that she talks more confidently to you than she feels. She probably senses that you love him and she is the kind of girl that loves to triumph over a rival.

Of course it is really almost impossible to tell whether a certain couple will be happy if or when married or not. The very fact that this girl is so different from the boy may, and probably is, the reason she attracts him and may be an argument in favor of a happy marriage. They may be congenial although different."

However, if you are convinced that he will not be happy and you want to win him, there is no reason why you cannot try to make those conversations longer and more interesting, mentioning matters you have in common and which you know are especially dear to his heart. And don't believe all the other girl says about her conquest. She may be the type who exaggerates things that have to do with the attentions she receives from men. And don't give up hope as long as he hasn't proposed to her, let alone being engaged or married.

DIVORCEE: You have my deep sympathy. Life hasn't treated you very well. I know. If this man whom you care for has found out that he cannot love you as he should his wife, or that marriage with you will not be for the happiness of either of you, the only honest thing he can do is to take the course he has taken, isn't it? It is, of course, unfortunate that you care so much and also that he took so long to find out that he didn't want marriage, but only friendship.

If seeing him makes you realize what you have lost, and you think if you did not see him you would think less of him and could eventually love another, why not tell him he had better not come again, and try to make other friends? Wouldn't that be better?

You know how unhappy a marriage can be when the husband's mother doesn't like his wife, and what trouble such a situation can cause. You don't want to go through that again, do you? You don't say where your children are, whether living or not. They should be your comfort. I think if I were you I would hesitate a long time before making again, as your two former marriages have turned out so badly.

You are young, however, and I know it is hard for you to live alone. I hope you will shortly meet someone with whom you will be happy.

Belle: Twenty-one is the legal age to wed without consent of parents and guardians in West Virginia. The law also states that you have to reside seven days before a license may be issued, and 30 days before the wedding may take place.

Eliminating Blemishes Is Difficult

By GLADYS GLAD

Although most unattractive skin conditions, barring actual skin diseases, will respond favorably to home remedies, the disfiguring little capillaries that sometimes appear on the cheeks and nose will not in the least be benefited by any amateur treatment.

These tiny, broken capillaries may result from a variety of causes. The self-indulgent misadventures of excess of fats and sweets may find these blemishes present on her cheeks and nose. The athletic dancel who participates in the more strenuous sports of the winter and summer seasons, and fails to protect her skin from the rigors of the weather, also may find herself the possessor of this condition.

If the texture of your skin is very fine, and the skin itself is exceedingly thin, the use of hot and cold towels alternately on the face may produce these unsightly capillaries. The use of ice as an astringent, and the practice of squeezing out blackheads and pimples also may cause the appearance of the condition.

These blemishes may be rapidly and successfully eliminated by electrolysis. The work, of course, should be done by an expert only. Any attempt to cure the condition at home will prove ineffective, and may even render the "broken veins" more prominent.

A swelling of the nose or face, in addition to the appearance of the broken capillaries, is something else again. Ordinarily, it is a chronic rosacea, a definite skin disease that requires treatment by a physician or skin specialist.

The wise thing to do, of course, is to prevent these little broken capillaries from appearing. Avoid mistreating your skin by squeezing blackheads and pimples, by using ice as an astringent, by applying hot and cold cloths alternately to your face. Simplify your diet, eliminating foods that stimulate the blood supply. And, if you participate in strenuous summer and winter sports, make sure that your skin is properly protected from the elements.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Egg Shampoo

Mrs. E. C. H.: You may use the egg shampoo on your daughter's hair with perfect safety. However, an occasional oil shampoo should be administered also.

Reducing

Boots: You should weigh about 116 pounds. My Method of reducing pills is contained in detail in my booklet on "The New Figure." The process is too long to print here.

Hands

M. R. C.: An excellent solution for perspiring hands can be made of two drams of boric acid, three drams of borax, three ounces of salicylic acid, three ounces of glycerine and three ounces of bay rum. Apply this solution three times a day.

EDITOR'S NOTE: While it is impossible for Miss Glad to answer beauty questions by mail, she will be happy to send you her pamphlets on "The New Figure" and "Beauty Culture," if you will write her, care of this paper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope and 10 cents in coin, for each, to cover cost of printing and mailing. Persons' questions on beauty will be answered through Miss Glad's daily column.

Pittsburgh's All-American Wing Man Of 1929 Selects
Fesler, Nemecek, Conley And Rosenzweig As Outstanding

EDITOR'S NOTE: This interview with Joe Donchess, Pittsburgh's great All-American end in 1929 and now an assistant coach at the Carnegie Tech, is the first of a series of stories in which famous football stars of the past select for you the stars of the 1930 football season. Stories by Ted Coy of Yale, Joe Bedenk of Penn State, Ed Weir of Nebraska and others will follow.

By JOE DONCHESS
All-American End—1929
Written Especially for Central Press and The Gazette

Mental capacity, speed and courage are the three essentials of a good end. And if I were picking ends for this year's All-American team I would look to those three points first.

I put mental capacity first because a good end must have something besides his physical perfection.

He must be an expert diagnostician, primarily on the defense. He must figure his play before he smashes into the opposition. An end who crashes into the other fellow blindly may miss everything.

Being with the ball is essential. I mean that he is besides protecting his own territory he must be ready to go beyond, to cut back at times and make tackles at the other side.

Jerry Nemecek of New York University is my idea of an end with great mental capacity and ability to quickly diagnose plays. Jerry also has plenty of courage and he is fast.

Speed Essential
Speed, of course, is absolutely essential in an all-star end. He must be able to get down under the punts, be in the open for passes and travel a little faster than the other fellow.

A man must have offensive capacity as well as defensive capacity. Ability to cut down the other fellow, run good interference, receive passes and, above all, ability to outsmart the opposing tackle.

The opposing tackle is generally a much bigger fellow and my all-star end must therefore be able to outsmart him. That's the only way he can outplay the opposing tackle.

I haven't said much so far on the subject of courage, because it is understood from the start that an end must have courage in great amounts if he is to get anywhere. All of my favorite ends, Wesley Fesler of Ohio, Nemecek of New York, Tom Conley of Notre Dame and Ted Rosenzweig of Carnegie Tech have plenty of courage. Every other good end I know has it.

An end takes lots of punishment and he must face the toughest kind of fighting on almost every play. It takes courage for a fellow to dive into three or four, men just as tough as he is. But that's his assignment.

A fellow might make my All-American team if he weighed only 165 pounds. Or he might weigh 200 or more. I wouldn't pay too much attention to his size if he could do all the things I have outlined.

No End of Good Ends
There has been mention of quite a number of outstanding ends this season, other than those already named. And a good many of these played on eastern teams.

Penn's two wingmen—Riblett and Burnett—have come in for good notices, especially Burnett for his stellar play against Cornell. Other eastern ends who have received newspaper praise for their work this year include Elliott of Syracuse, Messenger of Army, Bates of Western Maryland, Elciewicz of Fordham, Barnes of Yale, Yudky

SCHOOLS WILL HELP
SALE OF CHRISTMAS
SEALS HERE FRIDAY

Furthering the sale of Christmas Health seals among school children a special program is being planned for Friday in the public and parochial schools of the city. Friday will be observed as Health Day and the program is being arranged through the co-operation of F. R. Woodruff, of Central High School and the Rev. Lawrence Wessel, of St. Bridget Church. Children will be told the story of the Christmas seal and each child will be given a health button.

An extensive educational campaign for the sale of the seals is being furthered this year. Last week Dr. Alfred Lippert, of the Ohio state department of health, addressed children of the Greene County schools and also pupils of the city schools. In connection with his address he showed a film on health.

Sale of the Health Seals was started in the county November 24. Each school teacher in the county is chairman of that school district. Sale of the seals in Xenia city will begin December 15 and booths will be placed in a number of the downtown stores where the seals may be purchased.

N. Y. STOCK
MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—Rallies in steel, automobile and specialty stocks near the first hour today brought the general level of prices slightly above that of Monday's close. The utilities were under pressure as the session started. But the bears found comparatively little stock for sale at the bottom prices. New York Central dropped off to a new low at 119, but rallied to 121 before the end of the period.

It was altogether fitting that a season which had so many surprises should have one more as it went to its death out in California Saturday afternoon. Notre Dame's 27 to 0 victory over Southern California may not be classed as an upset but the decisive score certainly occasioned widespread surprise. Few of the "experts" expected the Ramblers to win at all let alone by the top-sided margin of four touchdowns. It all boils down to the fact Southern California was greatly overrated; it did not possess the strength it was credited with. This contest furnished a final sensation; one more topic for post-mortems.

It has been Presome to read of the endless success of Notre Dame eleven. When the Ramblers wound up their season Saturday afternoon they had been unbeaten in two years and had played before nearly a million people in representative parts of the country.

It was this college which practically invented the intersectional game. It is beating about the bush, though, to say merely Notre Dame. What is really meant is Knute Rockne, a man who must be called the greatest of football coaches.

Rockne has built up a state of mind which has made it unsafe for a large young man at Notre Dame to remain away from football. Notre Dame is a place where every body plays the game. House teams meet each other under the watchful eye of assistant coaches, who send promising material to the varsity. Two or three second teams play regular schedules of their own. More than a score of head football coaches throughout the country have been trained there. There must be almost that many graduate assistant coaches. No other sport has had anything like this record in American college life.

Those who know Rockne say you either like him with a blind zeal or you dislike the things he stands for. We once read:

"You cannot be without respect for a person so obviously sincere. In addition, he has a quick wit, somewhat deadened by a mania for 'hard guys,' but backed by a poise that has none of the stringent ego of Bob Zuppke, who likes to see himself referred to as 'The Little Napoleon,' and has his pictures taken with a lock of hair over his forehead."

Rockne has coined expressions and started famous football stories. It was he who applied the term 'meszaine hurdles' to those incomprehensible souls who prefer social to football careers. His influence on football—his revolt against the rules committee, his perfection of forward passing, and the introduction of speed to the middle of the line—is well known.

"His reaction to the Carnegie report was typical, and revealing. He condemned it, said it was striking at the democratic foundations of the country, for it implied that no poor but honest boy ought to have a chance to play college football."

At that, we also read that Rockne was not the sole originator of the Knute Rockne system of football. Instead, it was Charles Dorais, quarterback in 1912 of the team on which Knute played at end and Jess Harper, then coach at Notre Dame, who originated and laid the ground work for the grid system which Rockne later was to perfect and carry to fame.

As revealed at New Orleans, La., by Notre Dame's first athletic impresario, Father Michael Aloysius Quinlan, now rector of the Sacred Heart Church of New Orleans, it came about this way. To quote him:

"Came the changing of rules in football with Jess Harper as coach in 1912. During the summer before the sensational game with Army of that year, Charles Dorais, our wily little quarterback, and Rockne, who played end, went to a summer camping town to earn money to pay their way through school during the coming winter months."

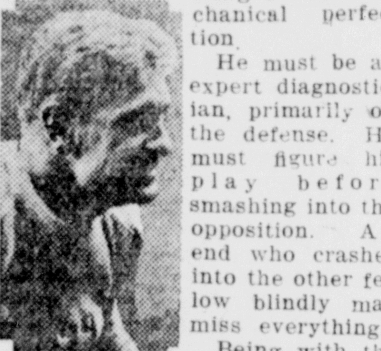

"At the suggestion of Harper, they took along a football to practice an idea Dorais conceived of tossing the pigskin around like a baseball and developing plays using the ball in this fashion—the forward pass."

"Dorais threw the ball from behind his head much as one would throw a baseball and Rockne practiced getting down the field and catching it. They practiced four hours a day until they had perfected the throwing and catching of the ball."

"That fall when Notre Dame played Army our team upset and startled the football world by beating Army, 27 to 0 and the victory was scored through the ability of Dorais to toss forward passes to Rockne. That was the birth of the forward pass."

MIXED BOWLING

The first of what is expected to develop into a regular series of "bowling parties" was enjoyed by the foremen of The Krippendorff-Dittmann Shoe Co. and their wives at the Recreation Parlor Saturday evening. The women as well as their husbands took the evening matches during the evening and a number of prizes were awarded for high scores recorded.

Joe Donchess
All-American End—1929

Speed, of course, is absolutely essential in an all-star end. He must be able to get down under the punts, be in the open for passes and travel a little faster than the other fellow.

A man must have offensive capacity as well as defensive capacity. Ability to cut down the other fellow, run good interference, receive passes and, above all, ability to outsmart the opposing tackle.

The opposing tackle is generally a much bigger fellow and my all-star end must therefore be able to outsmart him. That's the only way he can outplay the opposing tackle.

I haven't said much so far on the subject of courage, because it is understood from the start that an end must have courage in great amounts if he is to get anywhere. All of my favorite ends, Wesley Fesler of Ohio, Nemecek of New York, Tom Conley of Notre Dame and Ted Rosenzweig of Carnegie Tech have plenty of courage. Every other good end I know has it.

An end takes lots of punishment and he must face the toughest kind of fighting on almost every play. It takes courage for a fellow to dive into three or four, men just as tough as he is. But that's his assignment.

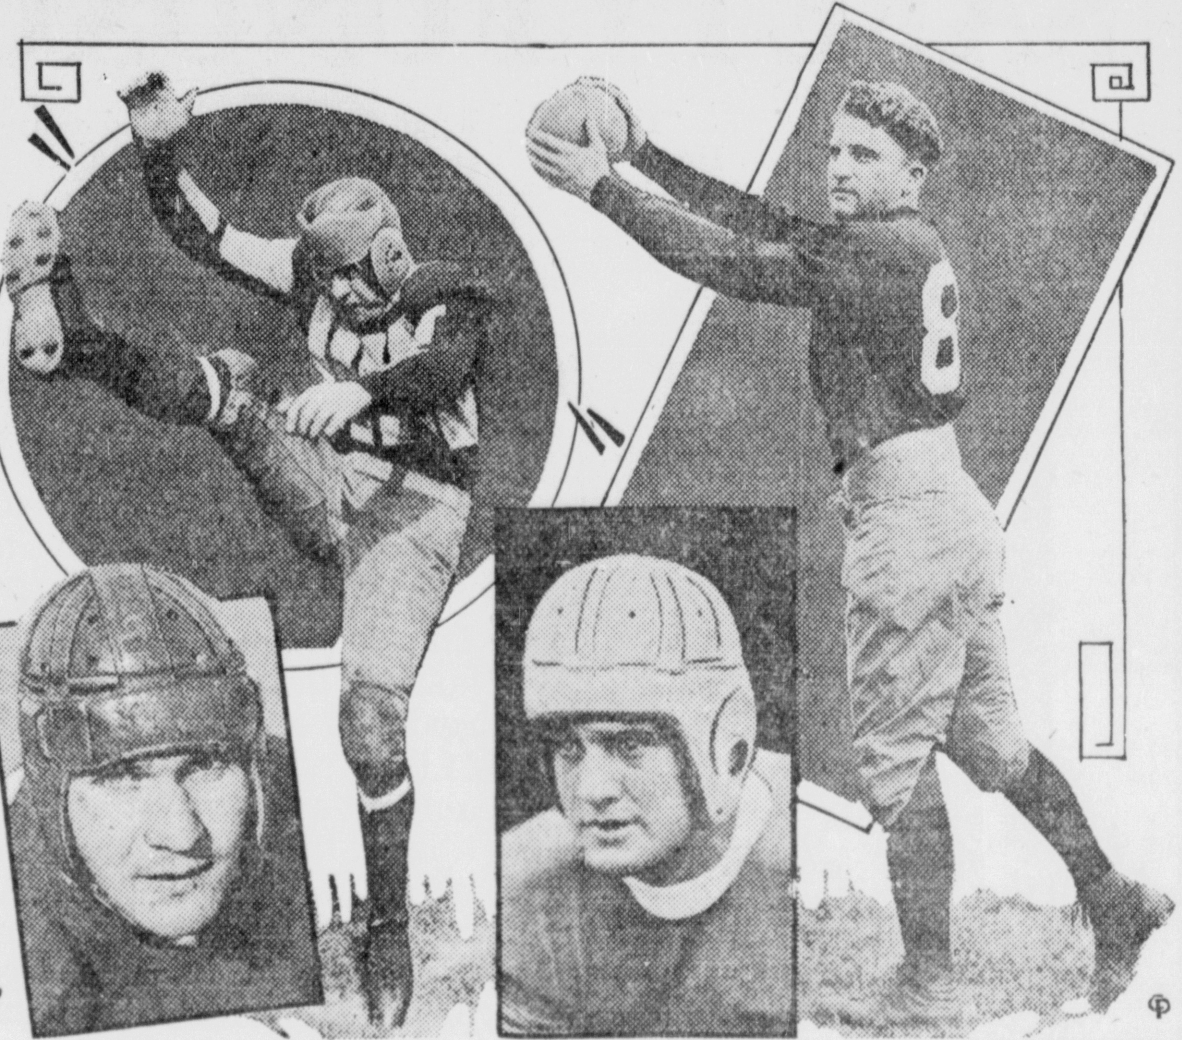

A fellow might make my All-American team if he weighed only 165 pounds. Or he might weigh 200 or more. I wouldn't pay too much attention to his size if he could do all the things I have outlined.

No End of Good Ends
There has been mention of quite a number of outstanding ends this season, other than those already named. And a good many of these played on eastern teams.

Penn's two wingmen—Riblett and Burnett—have come in for good notices, especially Burnett for his stellar play against Cornell. Other eastern ends who have received newspaper praise for their work this year include Elliott of Syracuse, Messenger of Army, Bates of Western Maryland, Elciewicz of Fordham, Barnes of Yale, Yudky

Fesler, Nemecek, Conley And Rosenzweig As Outstanding

EDITOR'S NOTE: This interview with Joe Donchess, Pittsburgh's great All-American end in 1929 and now an assistant coach at the Panther institution, is the first of a series of stories in which famous football stars of the past select for you the stars of the 1930 football season. Stories by Ted Coy of Yale, Joe Bedenk of Penn State, Ed Weir of Nebraska and others will follow.

By JOE DONCHESS
All-American End—1929
Written Especially for Central Press and The Gazette

Mental capacity, speed and courage are the three essentials of a good end. And if I were picking ends for this year's All-American team I would look to those three points first.

I put mental capacity first because a good end must have something besides mechanical perfection.

He must be an expert diagnostician, primarily on the defense. He must figure his play before smashing into the opposition. An end who crashes into the other fellow blindly may miss everything.

Being with the ball is essential. I mean that he besides protecting his own territory must be ready to go beyond, to cut back at times and make tackles at the other side.

Jerry Nemecek of New York University is my idea of an end with great mental capacity and ability to quickly diagnose plays. Jerry also has plenty of courage and he is fast.

Speed, of course, is absolutely essential in an all-star end. He must be able to get down under the punts, be in the open for passes and travel a little faster than the other fellow.

A man must have offensive capacity as well as defensive capacity. Ability to cut down the other fellow, run good interference, receive passes and, above all, ability to outsmart the opposing tackle.

SCHOOLS WILL HELP
SALE OF CHRISTMAS
SEALS HERE FRIDAY

Furthering the sale of Christmas Health seals among school children a special program is being planned for Friday in the public and parochial schools of the city. Friday will be observed as Health Day and the program is being arranged through the co-operation of F. R. Woodruff, of Central High School and the Rev. Lawrence Wessel, of St. Brigid Church. Children will be told the story of the Christmas seal and each child will be given a health button.

An extensive educational campaign for the sale of the seals is being furthered this year. Last week Dr. Alfred Lippert, of the Ohio state department of health, addressed children of the Greene County schools and also pupils of the city schools. In connection with his address he showed a film on health.

Sale of the Health Seals was started in the county November 24. Each school teacher in the county is chairman of that school district. Sale of the seals in Xenia city will begin December 15 and booths will be placed in a number of the downtown stores where the seals may be purchased.

N. Y. STOCK
MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—Rallies in steel, automobile and specialty stocks near the first hour today brought the general level of prices slightly above that of Monday's close. The utilities were under pressure as the session started. But the bears found comparatively little stock for sale at the bottom prices. New York Central dropped off to a new low at 119, but rallied to 121 before the end of the period.

SEEK GIRL BANDIT
MARION, O., Dec. 9.—Marion police were searching today for an attractive girl-bandit who locked B. F. Winters in a refrigerator at his grocery store here and escaped with $20 in cash.

It all boils down to the fact Southern California was greatly overrated; it did not possess the strength it was credited with. This contest furnished a final sensation; one more topic for post-mortems.

It has been a pleasure to read of the endless success of Notre Dame eleven. When the Ramblers wound up their season Saturday afternoon they had been unbeaten in two years and had played before nearly a million people in representative parts of the country.

It was this college which practically invented the intersectional game. It is beating about the bush, though, to say merely Notre Dame. What is really meant is Knute Rockne, a man who must be called the greatest of football coaches.

Rockne has built up a state of mind which has made it unsafe for a large young man at Notre Dame to remain away from football. Notre Dame is the place where every body plays the game. House teams meet each other under the watchful eyes of assistant coaches, who send promising material to the varsity. Two or three second teams play regular schedules of their own. More than a score of head football coaches throughout the country have been trained there. There must be almost that many graduate assistant coaches. No other sport has had anything like this record in American college life.

Those who know Rockne say you either like him with a blind zeal or you dislike the things he stands for. We once read:

"You cannot be without respect for a person so obviously sincere. In addition, he has a quick wit, some 'hard guys,' but backed by a police that has none of the stringent ego of Bob Zuppke, who likes to see himself referred to as 'The Little Napoleon,' and has his pictures taken with a lock of hair over his forehead."

"Rockne has coined expressions and started famous football stories. It was he who applied the term 'mezzanine hinders' to those incompressible souls who prefer social to football careers. His influence on football—his revolt against the rules committee, his perfection of forward passing, and the introduction of speed to the middle of the line—is well known."

"His reaction to the Carnegie report was typical and revealing. He condemned it, said it was striking at the democratic foundations of the country, for it implied that no poor but honest boy ought to have a chance to play college football."

At that, we also read that Rockne was not the sole originator of the Knute Rockne system of football. Instead, it was Charles Dora, quarterback in 1912 of the team on which Knute played at end and Jess Harper, then coach at Notre Dame, who originated and laid the ground work for the grid system which Rockne later was to perfect and carry to fame.

As revealed at New Orleans, La., by Notre Dame's first athletic impresario, Father Michael Aloysius Quinlan, now rector of the Sacred Heart Church of New Orleans, it came about this way. To quote him:

"Came the changing of rules in football with Jess Harper as coach in 1912. During the summer before the sensational game with Army of that year, Charles Dora, our wily little quarterback, and Rockne, who played end, went to a summer camping town to earn money to pay their way through school during the coming winter months."

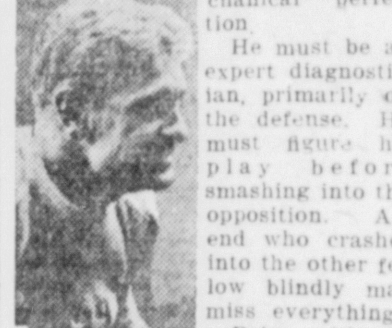

"At the suggestion of Harper, they took along a football to practicing the idea Dora conceived of tossing the pigskin around like a baseball and developing plays using the ball in this fashion—the forward pass."

"Dora threw the ball from behind his head much as one would throw a baseball and Rockne practiced getting down the field and catching it. They practiced four hours a day until they had perfected the throwing and catching of the ball."

"That fall when Notre Dame played Army our team upset and started the football world by beating Army, 27 to 0 and the victory was scored through the ability of Dora to toss forward passes to Rockne. That was the birth of the forward pass."

MIXED BOWLING

The first of what is expected to develop into a regular series of "bowling parties" was enjoyed by the foremen of The Krippendorf-Pittmann Shoe Co. and their wives at the Recreation Parlor Saturday evening. The women as well as their husbands took part in bowling matches during the evening and a number of prizes were awarded for high scores recorded.

Joe Donchess

Speed Essential

Speed, of course, is absolutely essential in an all-star end. He must be able to get down under the punts, be in the open for passes and travel a little faster than the other fellow.

A man must have offensive capacity as well as defensive capacity. Ability to cut down the other fellow, run good interference, receive passes and, above all, ability to outsmart the opposing tackle.

The opposing tackle is generally a much bigger fellow and my all-star end must therefore be able to outsmart him. That's the only way he can outplay the opposing tackle.

I haven't said much so far on the subject of courage, because it is understood from the start that an end must have courage in great amounts if he is to get anywhere. All of my favorite ends, Wesley Fesler of Ohio, Nemecek of New York, Tom Conley of Notre Dame and Ted Rosenzweig of Carnegie Tech have plenty of courage. Every other good end I know has it.

An end takes lots of punishment and he must face the toughest kind of fighting on most every play. It takes courage for a fellow to dive into three, perhaps four, men just as tough as he is. But that's his assignment.

A fellow might make my All-American team if he weighed only 165 pounds. Or he might weigh 200 or more. I wouldn't pay too much attention to his size if he could do all the things I have outlined.

No End of Good Ends
There has been mention of quite a number of outstanding ends this season, other than those already named. And a good many of these played on eastern teams.

Penn's two wingmen—Riblett and Burnett—have come in for good notices, especially Burnett for his stellar play against Cornell. Other eastern ends who have received newspaper praise for their work this year include Elliott of Syracuse, Messenger of Army, Bates of Western Maryland, Elciewicz of Fordham, Barres of Yale, Yudicky

Christmas Party in the GAY Nineties

THE Christmas party of the 90's—It was always a home festival, of course, for who would dream of separating himself from family circles on this greatest family day of all the year?

The holidays, then as now, had their round of gaieties, their balls for the college folk, their parties of the children, their frolics at the church and in the Sunday School, their teas, and their various other festivities; but the family that could not stir up a lively entertainment by itself and for itself for Christmas Eve, was indeed socially impoverished.

Homes were large and roomy in those days. The more lavish and elegant houses had ball rooms on their upper floor, but everywhere on Christmas eve every room of every home, mansion to cottage, was ablaze with light in every room, even the unused parlors thrown open for the family gatherings that began when, at an early hour in the evening, the first breeze of them began to arrive, mothers, fathers and children, maiden aunts and bachelor uncles, sometimes the family pastor, who had no family of his own, or the favorite teacher, stranded alone for the holidays, making up the great crowd of them when at last all had arrived.

To The Jingle Or Bells
Some of them would come by train in the daytime—guests whose arrival caused particular excitement by virtue of the distance, perhaps all of fifty or a hundred miles, which they had traveled. Some of them would drive up to the door with flourish of jingling sleigh bells and a flash of horse and cutter. The farmer brother would bring his family into town in the great bob sled in which he hauled wood in the daytime, and others would "walk over," the little youngsters bundled up on their wooden sleds and drawn over the packed snow on the wooden sidewalks to the very door of a hospitable home such as Aunt Martha's.

There were various reasons why Aunt Martha and Uncle Will were customarily the hosts of Christmas eve to a family party. For one thing, their's was the largest and newest home in the family. For another, Aunt Martha was the finest cook among the lot of excellent cooks, and she dearly loved the excitement and never minded any of the bother of entertaining.

Old Fashioned Verandah
Her wide and handsome house stood on a corner lot, surrounded by its verandah on the two street sides, with its bay windows down stairs and upstairs, its green shutters outside and its oaken blinds indoors. It was crowned with a magnificent cupola, and was brave with its roccoco adornment of porch roof and window frame. Its wide door swung wide to each arriving group, and the gas light flickered out below the fanlight to illuminate the porch and steps and aid the stumbling ones. Her cordial smile and the hearty handshake of Uncle Will went out in welcome as the guests were drawn inside, embraced and greeted and directed to bedrooms upstairs or down to remove their wraps. Cutters were driven back into the barn and horses tied in the stalls or unhitched for the hours of their merry-making.

Tree Of Importance
Focus point of attention among the youngsters from the first was the tree—one of rearing magnificence, branches almost touching the carpet and the top cut off that would otherwise have swept the ceiling, and the star of tinsel hung upon the top-most twig. Its ornamental glass balls and strings of tinsel caught the reflection of the gas chandelier's glittering pendants, and when, with gay ceremony Uncle Will lit the dozens of colored wax candles all over it as a signal for Santa Claus, many the "ohs" and the "ahs" that met its ravishing splendor. It seemed to the transfixed children that the pretty task was scarcely completed, when who should bounce in but Santa Claus himself! There he was actually, the same gay scarlet Santa of the picture books, with his pack of toys and his string of sleigh bells jingling as he hopped around from child to child, shaking hands and pinching cheeks and patting awed little faces to whom so wonderful a happening was simply unbelievable as real. He was the jolliest of Santa Clauses—as jolly as young Uncle George, for instance, and one wondered for just a minute where Uncle George had gone just then, but soon forgot him again when Santa began to swing the attention of all to the tree.

Santa And His "Brownies"
A band of little "brownies" was commanded among the youngsters by Santa, and gifts began to come down from the tree, to appear from hidden nooks beneath its branches or behind them, and girls and boys scurried from one to the other of the gay company as names were found on the packages and a child darted to deliver them to their owners. Everybody had a generous pile of things by the time the last candle had flicked down into its tin socket and all the lights were extinguished on the tree for safety, and everybody had a tarleton bag of candy, a red apple and an orange.

Jokes flew round and fun ran high in the holiday spirit of the evening rampant everywhere. Somebody suggested a song, about this time, and everybody flocked around the piano where Cousin Mamie, home for the holidays from college, coyly played a few of the skittish songs of the times—"Daisy Bell," and "We Won't Go Home Till Morning," and the like, then, everybody singing, with great gusto, there followed the favorites from the Family Song Album—"O Susanna," "Old Black Joe," "When You and I Were Young," "Swanee River," "After the Ball," "White Wings," "Two Little Girls in Blue," and many others. Finally the music struck into a gay quadrille, and everybody took partners for a square dance.

"Swing Your Partners"
Back and forth the partners wove, in and out and round and round, circling, swinging, shuffling, tripping and diving in and out, while Uncle Will called the figures, "swing your partners," "everybody wait," and all the rest of them. Fun waxed higher and higher and the Virginia reel was in order, with its long lane of partners bowing, swirling, meeting, parting, marching and stepping to the gay music, until everybody had laughed and danced until they were quite out of breath and a halt was called while handkerchiefs fanned hot faces or wiped perspiring brows.

Somebody then discovered that the children were wearied of that sort of entertainment and suggested games in which they might participate. Cousin Mamie whirled back on the piano stool and dashes into a lively march as chairs are set back to back in a long row for "Going to Jerusalem," and round and round march the girls and boys, intent on flipping down into a seat when the music suddenly stops, and when one marcher was always left chairless and out of the game. Then followed "Spin the Platter," with the tin plate spun in the middle of the group of players while names of fruits or vegetables were called and in the ensuing scramble two players fought again for a chair, and then someone wanted "Blind Man's Buff." Half a dozen or more of these games followed in succession. By that time the evening was well spent, and whiffs of the odor of coffee began to come from the regions rear.

And On What "Eats"
Everybody was ordered to find a seat, and with the flutter scarcely died down in came the hostess and her helpers with great piles of plates, each plate with its folded triangle of paper napkin, and steaming dish after dish came by and stopped for each to help himself—platters of cold meat, dishes of "scaloped" potatoes, pans of baked beans, pressed glass bowls of cabbage salad, jars of pickles, dishes of celery, platters high with thick sandwiches of meat and cheese, plates of hot biscuits, dishes of jellies and preserves, piles of yellow cheese, platters of sugared doughnuts, and then, oh, treat of winter treats, saucers piled high with home made ice cream, yellow with cream and smooth of texture, as the best of custards, and custard frozen it was indeed, the mixture boiled and then consigned to the freezer. Mountains of layer cake and slices of fruit cake and pound cakes, cubes of sponge cake and dozens of gaily-decorated cup cakes went round with this. Coffee flowed freely and so did milk for the youngsters, ready to drop to sleep with sheer exhaustion at this stage of the game, but prodded awake by fond parents with an eye to their fitness for the home journey, until the feast was over, everybody stuffed to excess capacity and conscious that the hour was late—actually midnight, and parting time was at hand.

And A Pleasant Time
So the sleepy and sleeping youngsters were crammed into their wraps, horses were hitched again in the barn and sleighs brought round to the door, sleds were manned with small passengers and every father and nearly every mother had a sleeping child across the shoulder. Loud and enthusiastic were the expressions of pleasure in the evening's merriment, many were the "Merry Christmases" exchanged, for the mystic hour of midnight was indeed arrived, and Uncle Will and

Aunt Martha closed the wide door slowly on the last of the gay company, took a last look around at the garlands of green and the shorn spruce in the parlor corner, shut the blinds, wound the clocks and made their way sleepily up stairs to bed.

SAFETY FUNDS GROW

"The Home Of Thrift"

Last week we called your attention to the fact that the Superintendent of Building Associations for Ohio reported that not a dollar was lost by a depositor in an Ohio Association last year, and that none of the more than 800 associations had failed or discontinued business.

Let us now call your attention to another most significant item in that report. It is that, within the year, the Ohio Associations put into their Safety Funds, or Reserves for protection against losses, more than three times as much money as was taken out for all purposes.

The question has sometimes been asked as to how far business depressions and fluctuations of real estate values would affect the responsibility of the Associations. These items of the Superintendent's report satisfactorily answer that question. First mortgages and careful state supervision account, in the main, for this splendid record.

We offer you 6% Compound Interest and complete Safety for your Savings.

Scribe Will Interview Hawks For Air Audience

CAPT. Frank Hawks, America's speed king of the air, will be interviewed by Grantland Rice, sports writer, in a program to be broadcast Wednesday evening at 10:30 o'clock. The program will be heard over the NBC network, coming through station WSAI, Cincinnati.

Hawks holds practically every air speed record in the country. Last August he broke Col. Charles Lindbergh's transcontinental record, on September 9 he established a speed record between Detroit and New York and he also piloted the first towed glider across the continent. Graham McNamee will announce the program.

Honor Music Counsel

The Advertising Club luncheon in honor of Walter Damosch, music counsel for the National Broadcasting Co., will be broadcast over an extensive NBC network Wednesday. The broadcast will last from 1:15 to 2 p. m. and Damosch will be principal speaker.

Composer Is Guest Artist

Percy Grainger, distinguished Australian pianist and composer, will be guest artist during the Modigliani Concert which Nathaniel Shilkret will direct Wednesday evening at 8:30 o'clock. Two new selections will be played by Grainger for the first time. The program will be heard through station WSAI, Cincinnati.

Engagement Announced

Announcement of the engagement of Adele Vasa, star of grand opera and radio, and Paul A. Greene, formerly of Cincinnati, was made last week. Date of their marriage has not been announced. Miss Vasa has been associated with the Columbia Broadcasting System for the last three years, appearing in the Philco, Paramount, Cathedral Hour and grand

BUYING MORE BUT SPENDING LESS

Even when money is scarce and everybody is trying to stretch incomes as far as possible, A&P stores are crowded just like this.

More people are buying food in A&P stores today than ever before. Old customers are paying less for what they buy than they paid last year. And new customers are getting more for what they pay.

The ranks of A&P customers go right on growing in bad times as well as in good, because the public likes to get full value for its money.

Money goes far in A&P stores—not fast.

Scribe Will Interview Hawks For Air Audience

CAPT. Frank Hawks, America's speed king of the air, will be interviewed by Grantland Rice, sports writer, in a program to be broadcast Wednesday evening at 10:30 o'clock. The program will be heard over the NBC network, coming through station WSAI, Cincinnati.

Hawks holds practically every air speed record in the country. Last August he broke Col. Charles Lindbergh's trans-continental record, on September 9 he established a speed record between Detroit and New York and he also piloted the first towed glider across the continent. Graham McNamee will announce the program.

Honor Music Counsel.

The Advertising Club luncheon in honor of Walter Damosch, music counsel for the National Broadcasting Co., will be broadcast over an extensive NBC network Wednesday. The broadcast will last from 1:15 to 2 p. m. and Damosch will be principal speaker.

Composer Is Guest Artist

Percy Grainger, distinguished Australian pianist and composer, will be guest artist during the Mobil Concert which Nathaniel Shilkret will direct Wednesday evening at 8:30 o'clock. Two new selections will be played by Grainger for the first time. The program will be heard through station WSAI, Cincinnati.

Engagement Announced

Announcement of the engagement of Adele Vasa, star of grand opera and radio, and Paul A. Greene, formerly of Cincinnati, was made last week. Date of their marriage has not been announced. Miss Vasa has been associated with the Columbia Broadcasting System for the last three years, appearing in the Philco, Paramount, Cathedral Hour and grand

Recollection of Those Interesting Days

Christmas tree ornaments in the '90's were practically all home-made—strings of popped corn colored red with colored sugar, strings of red cranberry beads, strings alternating the cranberries with the white pop corn. There was usually a wax angel, carefully kept from season to season, to surmount the top of the tree. Electric lights were unheard of in the early '90's, and candles always supplied illumination. The tree stood in a corner of the parlor on a sheet where falling candle wax and dropping needles might be caught and the carpet go unharmed.

The carpet was of Brussels or Ingrain weave, ornately floral if the former, a utilitarian red or other dark color if the latter. It came up every spring and fall for house-cleaning, got a thorough beating with a stick or leather carpet-beater, then—perhaps turned for novelty or freshness, tucked down again all around the edge of the room.

The plant stand occupied the sunniest part of the bay window—steps of wood or wire accommodating the umbrella plant, the wax plant, the Christmas cactus, the pink-flowered oxalis, the geraniums, the calla lily and the scarlet amaryllis. The palm and sword fern flourished regally on onyx or marble-topped high and slender tables with frames of high-burnished brass in the reception hall or in the parlor.

Hair cloth that pricked the legs of the visiting children still survived on sofa and carved chair, although the machine carved oak was fast taking the place of ancestral walnut and mahogany.

The piano itself was an upright of highly polished oak or ebony, or a ponderous grand piano that filled much of the space in the average parlor. Musical instruments were placed elegantly about the parlor—the guitar, mandolin and the banjo, importantly.

The hanging lamp with glittering fringe of glass prisms, or shade of ruby glass or frosted glass "hand plant" ceiling center in parlor, sitting-room and dining-room. It drew up and down on chains of brass or nickel, and the lamp lifted out for filling. Bed-room lamps were of glass, plain or fancy, with standards and with paper shades, and kitchen lamps hung in iron rings on the wall with burnished tin reflectors back of their glass chimneys. Filling the lamps with kerosene oil and cleaning the chimneys in hot soapy water was a domestic rite of every morning.

The parlor was likely to be crowded with ornate "fussiness" of bric-a-brac. Enlarged cabinet photographs of members of the family framed in heavy gilt reposed on frail white painted wooden easels that were draped with fringed silk squares. Dollies of fine thread lace or "battenburg," knitted or crocheted or embroidered in colored silk on white linen, were everywhere. The family Bible always had its place of honor in conspicuous spot and had its dolly to cover it. Everything from fancy perfume bottles to specimens of iron and gold ore reposed in bric-a-brac cabinets. The family album was still an honorable and respected adjunct by way of ornament with its covers of plush or decorated celluloid. Curious of every sort crowded the home of the traveled. Cat tails and dried pampas grass hung from the walls in fancy "pockets" or stood in the decorated tile in the corner. The gilded rolling pin and milking stool might still be discovered in the parlor of the '90's, and shells, large and small, from sea and river, were distinctly parts of the decorative scheme.

Counters were white, muslin, starched, within an inch of their lives, and "fluted" with the fluting iron which was a corrugated half cylinder that rocked on a corrugated platform. Pillows were set against the bolster roll beneath the pillow shams that matched the counterpane. A favorite design for a hired girl's room was worked in turkey red cotton on white muslin, one sham showing the peacefully sleeping domestic, the other showing her broom in hand. The one read, "I slept and thought that life was beauty," the other, "I woke and found that life was duty."

Pictures were frequently sentimental—"The Soldier's Farewell," "Alone at Last," and the like. They viewed with the steel engravings of the "Battle of Waterloo," with the oil paintings executed by some member of the family with more or less talent to copy colored prints of horses, cows knee deep in country brooks, puppies or kittens, flowers and landscapes, all framed elaborately in gilt, and with the framed prints themselves. Some of these came as supplements with the Sunday newspapers, others might be had for a certain number of soap wrappers—"A Yard of Violets," "A Yard of Puppies," a yard of any number of things. Walls were crowded with pictures of fearful and wonderful variety.

The Western organ, with its fretted wood case and upholstered stool, its pedals and stops, ornamental music rack and sliding keys cover.

Upstairs in the bedrooms with bed, bureau and wash stand of matching wood, one found the china toilet set and the embroidered splasher adorned with ducks or something else aquatic, such as pond lilies, with its imperative command to "Splash!"

The base burner was the glory of the family sitting room, or the parlor that was not "closed off for the winter." It was a friendly monstrosity of iron with nickel trim, little squares of mica in its doors, a highly ornamental crown, stove pipes and base. It sat on a square of zinc which protected the carpets from falling coals. The ash pan could be slid out at the front and emptied, the poker stood always at hand to agitate the coals into their friendly red glow, and the coal scuttle held it and the long thin shovel for the coal. It was set up with great ceremony in October and banished again with great satisfaction in the spring.

Bear rugs, rugs of leopard or tiger or goat, were extremely smart, not only in the luxurious boudoir but before the fireplace in the parlor. The fireplace usually had a false hearth where no fire could be built, or the gas grate just then appearing.

Colored celluloid combs that showed the hair straight back from the face and encircled the head, were the vogue among little girls. Pigtales followed them when the girls were school girls, with hair ribbons to match the frocks.

The leather satchel was the favorite traveling convenience, although the carpet bag was seen occasionally. The gladstone bag was in evidence, but the suit case did not appear for some years later.

The candy pull was a favorite social diversion, frequently coupled with the sleigh ride. Companies of young people engaged a bob sleigh for these and rode in the hay under the buffalo robes with sleigh bells jingling on the harnesses of the horses, their eventual destination somebody's home and an oyster supper or candy pull.

The over-stuffed lounge of cloth or leather necessary to every sitting room, always had an incline at one end. The parlor sofa held a multitude of delicate silk sofa pillows, frilled and ruffled, but the lounge usually had a regulation bed pillow with white pillow slip with its wide crocheted insertion or edging.

The crocheted fascinator was one of the cleverest of wraps for home or evening, according to color and fineness of yarn. It was square, and made usually of fine soft silky white yarn, and was followed soon by the crocheted "umbrella" shawl, made circular, folded through the middle, half thrown over the shoulders, the other half over the head.

Little girls rode on tricycles, little boys on velocipedes, grownups on bicycles, some of them tandem.

Special blouse and bloomer suits of flannel or divided skirts were deemed necessary for the woman.

who cycled. Trips for groups of friends were popular everywhere—sometimes to as many as five miles distant.

The horse drawn bus plied between the railway station and the homes, making the rounds in time for the few trains of the day, going and coming from the nearby cities.

Rugs were highly ornamental—one walked on shaggy dogs, horses, or clusters of flowers—highly-colored and sometimes rather fanciful.

Trundle beds for children were low enough to slip under the parents' wooden beds, their ends folded under them, during the day. Feather beds were still the favorites against the mattress, and pillows of goose feathers were of immense size.

Colored glass insets in doors were considered extremely nobly. Colored glass windows were also in order on stairways and in halls or in panels above the large windows of the parlors.

The long fur boa was in vogue for women, the fur collar, a short cape reaching over the shoulders and turning up around the ears, for young women, and the little girls had their collars of angora goat fur with muffs.

Curling tongs, that made one's frizzes tight and smart, were weird contraptions of heavy iron, with long handles opening and shutting, and long prongs, heated in the lamp chimney, opening and closing over the hair and into each other. The curling iron that was a single cylinder with wooden handles, and which heated similarly, was more generally used.

Infants were swathed in baby clothes long and fine and numerous, layer after layer of them over the flannel garter and petticoats and woolen shirts which drew on over the head. Kid booties as well as crocheted and knitted ones were the rule. Baby always had a veil, and mother would rather be caught without any other articles of dress than face veil and kid gloves.

Small iron anvils or flat irons were devoted to nut crackings, the hammer completing the equipment, although there were patent spring used the Mrs. Potts sad irons with detachable wooden handles, and the gas or electric iron had not been invented. Every Christmas stocking held a kaleidoscope—a cylinder of cardboard with colored paper and with a glass frame at the end wherein small bits of colored mica or paper shook themselves into fascinating patterns as it was put to the eye and turned with hands.

The one read, "I slept and thought that life was beauty," the other, "I woke and found that life was duty."

Pictures were frequently sentimental—"The Soldier's Farewell," "Alone at Last," and the like. They lived with the steel engravings of the "Battle of Waterloo," with the oil paintings executed by some member of the family with more or less talent to copy colored prints of horses, cows knee deep in country brooks, puppies or kittens, flowers and landscapes, all framed elaborately in gilt, and with the framed prints themselves. Some of these came as supplements with the Sunday newspapers, others might be had for a certain number of soap wrappers—"A Yard of Violets," "A Yard of Puppies," a yard of any number of things. Walls were crowded with pictures of fearful and wonderful variety.

The Estey organ graced many a home, with its fretted wood case and upholstered stool, its pedals and stops, ornamental music rack and sliding keys cover.

Upholstery in the bedrooms with bed, bureau and wash stand of matching wood, one found the china toilet set and the embroidered splasher adorned with ducks or something else aquatic, such as pond lilies, with its imperative command to "Splash!"

The base burner was the glory of the family sitting room or the parlor that was not "closed off for the winter." It was a friendly monstrosity of iron with nickel trim, little squares of mica in its doors, a highly ornamental crown, stove pipes and base. It sat on a square of zinc which protected the carpets from falling coals. The ash pan could be slid out at the front and emptied the poker stood always at hand to agitate the coals into their friendly red glow, and the coal scuttle held it and the long thin shovel for the coal. It was set up with great ceremony in October and banished again with great satisfaction in the spring.

Bear rugs, rugs of leopard or tiger or goat, were extremely smart, not only in the luxurious boudoir but before the fireplace in the parlor. The fireplace usually had a false hearth where no fire could be built, or the gas grate just then appearing.

Colored celluloid combs that shoved the hair straight back from the face and encircled the head, were the vogue among little girls. Pigtales followed them when the girls were school girls, with hair ribbons to match the frocks.

The leather satchel was the favorite traveling convenience, although the carpet bag was seen occasionally. The gladstone bag was in evidence, but the suit case did not appear for some years later.

The candy pull was a favorite social diversion, frequently coupled with the sleigh ride. Companies of young people engaged a bob sleigh for these and rode in the hay under the buffalo robes with sleigh bells jingling on the harnesses of the horses, their eventual destination somebody's home and an oyster supper or candy pull.

The overstuffed lounge of cloth or leather necessary to every sitting room, always had an incline at one end. The parlor sofa held a multitude of delicate silk sofa pillows, frilled and ruffled, but the lounge usually had a regulation bed pillow with white pillow slip with its wide crocheted insertion or edging.

The crocheted fascinator was one of the cleverest of wraps for home or evening, according to color and fineness of yarn. It was square, and made usually of fine soft silky white yarn, and was followed soon by the crocheted "umbrella" shawl, made circular, folded through the middle, half thrown over the shoulders, the other half over the head.

Little girls rode on tricycles, little boys on velocipedes, grownups on bicycles, some of them tandems.

Special blouse and bloomer suits of flannel or divided skirts were deemed necessary for the woman who cycled. Trips for groups of friends were popular everywhere—sometimes to as many as five miles distant.

The horse drawn bus plied between the railway station and the homes, making the rounds in time for the few trains of the day, cities.

Rugs were highly ornamental—one walked on shaggy dogs, horses, or clusters of flowers highly-colored and sometimes rather fanciful.

Trundle beds for children were low enough to slip under the parents' wooden beds, their ends folded under them, during the day. Feather beds were still the favorites against the mattress, and pillows of goose feathers were of immense size.

Colored glass insets in doors were considered extremely novel by colored glass windows were also in order on stairways and in halls or in panels above the large windows of the parlors.

The long fur boa was in vogue for women, the fur collarette, a short cape reaching over the shoulders and turning up around the ears, for young women, and the little girls had their collars of angora goat fur with muffs.

Curling tongs, that made one's frizzes tight and smart, were weird contraptions of heavy iron, with long handles opening and shutting, and long prongs, heated in the lamp chimney, opening and closing over the hair and into each other. The curling iron that was a single cylinder with wooden handles, and which heated similarly, was more generally used.

Women's muffs were just large enough for the hands to be covered by them. Fur coats and capes were almost always of real seal or mink, varied with chinchilla.

The piano lamp was the pride of the parlor, its standard of twisted brass, reaching up from a tripod base, telescoped to enable it to be raised to various heights that it might cast its glow on the music rack. Its shade was an elaborate creation of fine silk or tissue paper made on a wire frame. Frequently the tissue paper caught fire from the flame, and then there was commotion and consternation.

Callers were entertained with the showing of pictures through the wooden framed stereoscope, whose two square lens fitted into a curved box that covered the eyes and fitted the forehead, and which were focused to magnify the photographs mounted in pairs side by side on long narrow cards that fitted into a wire frame that could be brought far or near, according to one's vision.

Infants were swathed in baby clothes long and fine and numerous, layer after layer of them over the flannel garter and petticoats and woolen shirts which drew on over the head. Kid booties as well as crocheted and knitted ones were the rule. Baby always had a veil, and mother would rather be caught without any other articles of dress than face veil and kid gloves.

Small iron anvils or flat irons were devoted to nut cracking, the hammer completing the equipment, although there was a variety of patent spring crackers existing. Only the few used the Mrs. Potts sad irons with detachable wooden handles, and with colored paper and with a glass frame at the end wherein small bits of colored mica or paper shook themselves into fascinating patterns as it was put to the eye and turned with hands.

DEATH CLAIMS MISS ARRENA M. WHITSON TUESDAY MORNING

Miss Arrena M. Whitson, 71, died at her home near New Burlington, Tuesday morning at 7:30 o'clock. She had been in frail health her entire life but had been an invalid for the past five years following a stroke of paralysis. Her condition had been serious for three weeks.

She was born on the farm where she died, June 28, 1859, the daughter of the late Noah and Sarah E. Mann Whitson. She had spent her entire life on the home farm. She was a member of the Sunday School Home Department of the New Burlington M. E. Church. She is survived by a sister, Miss Hannah M. Whitson, at home and the following cousins: Lee Whitson, at home; Mrs. Osie Gano, Dayton; Mrs. Lizzie Peterson and Mrs. Hazel Smith, Xenia.

FORBID EMPLOYEES OUTSIDE POSITIONS

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 9. — City employees of Columbus today were refused the right to hold any positions or to accept special employment outside their regular duties. A resolution to this effect was passed last night by city council in an effort to prevent competition of persons regularly employed with the thousands of jobless men and women in Columbus.

HAVE COLOR IN CHEEKS

If your skin is yellow—complexion pallid—tongue coated—appetite poor—you have a bad taste in your mouth—a lazy, no-good feeling—you should try Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets—a substitute for calomel—were prepared by Dr. Edwards after 20 years of study. Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound. Know them by their olive color.

To have a clear, pink skin, bright eyes, no pimples, a feeling of buoyancy like childhood days, you must get at the cause. Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets act on the liver and bowels like calomel—yet have no dangerous after effects. They start the bile and help overcome constipation. Take nightly and note the pleasing results. Millions of boxes sold yearly. 15c, 30c, 60c.

W. H. DONGES DRUG STORE WILL BE MOVED TO NEW LOCATION

The Donges drug store, which has occupied its present location in the Flynn Bldg. at 40 S. Detroit St. for the last thirty and one-half years and owns the distinction of being the second oldest original business in Xenia, will be moved about February 1, 1931 to the Donges Bldg. at 30 S. Detroit St. William H. Donges, local druggist, disclosed Tuesday he expects to surrender his present lease February 1 and relocate the drug store on the first floor room of his own three-story building three doors to the north on the same side of the street.

Mr. Donges purchased the building in 1913 and the ground floor room is now and has been for more than twenty-five years occupied by a branch of The Kroger Grocery and Baking Co., the first Xenia branch of the concern to be established here. The Knights of Columbus has lodge rooms on the second floor of the building while the third floor is unoccupied.

Mr. Donges also announced he plans extensive exterior and interior remodeling work at the new location for his business. An attractive new store front will be built and complete new furniture and equipment, including a modern soda fountain, will be installed. The new location for the drug store has a twenty-foot front and is ninety-seven feet in length.

Whether, as reported, the Kroger branch store may move into the room to be vacated by the drug store, has not been decided.

Bankrupt's Petition For Discharge

IN BANKRUPTCY NO. 2221
O. F. EAVERS, Bankrupt.
To the Honorable Robert R. Nevin, Judge of the District Court of the United States, for the Southern District of Ohio, at Dayton:

O. F. Eavers, of Ross Township, in the county of Greene, and State of Ohio, in said district, respectfully represents that on the 27th day of March, last past, he was duly adjudged bankrupt under the acts of Congress relating to bankruptcy; that he has duly surrendered all his property and rights of property and has fully complied with all the requirements of said acts and of the orders of the court touching his bankruptcy.

Wherefore he prays that he may be decreed by the court to have a full discharge from all debts provable against his estate under said bankruptcy acts, except such debts as are excepted by law from such discharge.

Dated this 14th day of November, A. D. 1930.

O. F. EAVERS, Bankrupt.
ORDER OF NOTICE THEREON
Southern District of Ohio, at Dayton, ss.

On this 17th day of November, A. D. 1930, on reading the foregoing petition, it is ordered by the court, that a hearing be had upon the same on the 2nd day of February, A. D. 1931, before said court, at Dayton, in said district, at 9:30 o'clock in the forenoon; and that notice thereof be published in the Xenia Gazette, a newspaper printed in said district, and that all known creditors and other persons in interest may appear at the said time and place and show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of the said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered by the court, that the clerk shall send by mail to all known creditors, copies of said petition and this order, addressed to them at their places of residence, as stated.

Witness the Honorable Robert R. Nevin, Judge of the said court, and the seal thereof, at Dayton, in said district, on the 17th day of November, A. D. 1930.

HARRY F. RABE, Clerk
By R. L. HARSHA, Deputy Clerk.

JORETTA A LOVE STORY

By EDNA ROBB WEBSTER Author of "DAD'S GIRL" Etc.

READ THIS FIRST:
Joretta Dowling is the beautiful daughter of a western merchant, whose socially ambitious mother has influenced her engagement to a wealthy shipbuilder, Norman Williams. He is addicted to drinking and jealousy, but Mrs. Dowling rushes the plans for the wedding in the autumn. Joretta has fallen in love with Jim Norton, the chief engineer on her father's new yacht. She finds he is an aristocrat by birth and a mechanical genius. He confides to her that he is working on a new carburetor for gas engines. Meanwhile, her father is making secret trips with the yacht to a southern port, to visit a mine that he has bought from a party of crooks. Lopez, Mike and a beautiful Mexican girl, Joretta and Norman are attending a house party at Long Beach, given by her friend Audrey Landon. Norman suggests that they all go to Agua Caliente, to which Joretta consents unwillingly. Norman humiliates Joretta there and refuses to leave until the group of three crooks enter the place, and he sees the Mexican girl. Joretta decides to ask Norman to postpone their marriage, but her mother forbids her even to think of such a thing.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER 21
"Yes—oh, good morning, Norman! No, but Jetty is right here. Yes—one moment, please—" she covered the transmitter with her hand, and beamed upon Jetty. "Dear, do be nice to him. If he was a bit indiscreet last night, forgive him. You can't expect a man to be perfect—and he really hasn't another fault. And so he is things in his favor. Do be reasonable, dear."

Joretta took the instrument. "Good morning. Yes—oh fair—" while Mrs. Dowling held her breath awaiting her next words. Norman was saying, "Of course, you've forgiven me for yesterday, haven't you, sweetheart? You know I'm not myself."

"But that's just it, Norman—" her mother held up a warning finger. "But you've said that before."

"I know. But I'm really improving, don't you think? And I'll be getting better and better, every day in every way, until I'll be a model husband, with a life guarantee and all."

His confidence in himself didn't convince her—but what chance had she? Even if Norman didn't drink to excess, she wouldn't like him any better. It wasn't just that. She didn't exactly know what all it was. But she had started something she couldn't stop—had tied a knot with her tongue that she couldn't untie with her teeth.

"May I have lunch with you? I want to see you soon," Norman continued.

"No thanks. Mother and I have engagements for the afternoon. I'm sorry," she added as an afterthought.

"Worse luck! Well, dinner. How about the yacht club? And perhaps a little ride after. Is the Montezuma in?"

"I think so. Shall I ask mother and dad to go along?"

"Of course. And I'll get Sally and Jack. All have dinner together. Eight o'clock."

Her mother smiled with infinite relief. "You see, dear? You get to imagining things. Everything clears up in the morning. And all your life it will be that way, no matter whom you marry or don't. Petty doubts and trifling incidents that assume momentous proportions at the time, and are really nothing. You can't expect perfection in anything. And think what remarkably good fortune is yours, having Norman in love with you like this. He is devoted itself. And add to that what else he is offering you—wealth, social position, family. My dear, you are so fortunate that you can't appreciate it. Feeling better now?" brightly.

"Yes, thank you, mummy. I'll be ready to go with you in half an hour."

When her mother had gone, Joretta munched listlessly on a bit of toast, her thoughts confusing her at the same time that her mind felt blank, inert. It would be a relief not to think any more. Just drift. She had to go on. No one would offer a helping hand to save her. There wasn't even a floating piece of driftwood in sight—just that irresistible current sweeping her on, helpless.

Throughout the day, her motions were automatic. She felt like a robot, propelled by some mechanical force outside herself; speaking, smiling, acting at the will of another. What was the use of having any individuality, anyway? If you had to do just as others commanded, better to be entirely submissive and impassive.

At Mme. Jenet's luxurious salon, she listlessly submitted to being fitted with one gown after another. Did she prefer the green or the peach silk crepe—or both? Either would do to cause them and both were very recherche.

There were complete sets of lingerie for every gown, all hand-made and hand-embroidered, with real lace; tailored sets for sports wear. Mrs. Dowling selected, advised, suggested, with the animation one would have expected from the bride-elect, herself.

"You also brought the dresses for the attendants? Twelve costumes, in the pastel rainbow shades?"

"Oui, oui, Madame. Would made-moiselle like to see ze so chic ones I have select?"

"No, than you. I'll come down when the girls are fitted. When will that be, mother?"

"Next week. As soon as madame is finished with all yours. Did you decide on the aquamarine blue evening gown, or are six enough? Remember, you will not reach Paris for three or four weeks, to get more clothes. Better take the blue and the gold lame, too."

Why so much fuss and ado over one bride? Why every day, girls were marrying men and finding happiness, even with one new dress. If Norman loved her, why should he care how many times she wore the same dress—why must she exert such an effort to make herself attractive to him? Blue, yellow, orchid—there were only such a limited number of colors from which to select, and one wore them over and over—why decide on green this time and pink the next time? Such a small matter for decision, and yet women debated the question over and over with all the importance and solemnity of a senate discussing affairs of state.

When they had finished at Mme. Jenet's, it was not yet tea-time, so they shopped for gloves, kerchiefs, stockings. There were scores of smaller items yet to assemble. And there was not too much time. Already, florists were timing the blooming of hundreds of flowers for the event; forcing some ahead, holding other bulbs and roots in cold storage until the proper time to start them growing, that all would have reached perfection for that particular day. Even special gold-wrought candelabra were being made to hold the hundreds of white cathedral candles which would flood the altar with their mellifluous glow.

Trademen welcomed such events among the social elite. Scores of them shared in the elaborate expenditures. Perhaps, after all, that was really the compensation for what would otherwise be a waste of effort and display. Live and let live. The luxuries of the wealthy provided employment and profit for those who labored. Distribution.

Mrs. Dowling questioned no price or quantity—only effect and quality. She visioned every appointment of the ceremony, the reception, the bridal party and the honeymoon, so far as it was within her power. Never did a production manager or stage or screen conceive a more gorgeous spectacle.

Already, she had planned to see last detail the announcement dinner at the smartest hotel, for their guests. Never before had there been such a wedding on the east coast, and she surmised that it would be some years again before another would rival it. Enough, years in which society and social chroniclers would allude by comparison to the Williams wedding, until Joretta would again appear in the limelight—with her own children, perhaps, who would be her grandchildren.

Norman came for them at eight that evening, in his most genial mood, which had the desired effect on the elder Dowlings. But Joretta could not respond to his attentive consideration of her, try as she did. She found herself, almost even to follow the conversation, for her thoughts insisted upon wandering back to his ruthlessness of the previous day. Surely, love wasn't like that—if you loved a person, you couldn't be so inconsiderate as to cause them pain and humiliation one day, and be so deeply concerned for their comfort and happiness the next. She wondered why Norman wanted her, anyway. Why was he so anxious for the day that would bring them into each other's association for the rest of their lives?

Their differences and disagreements were many, she had discovered. Already, her conservatism and prejudices had irritated him frequently, as his had her. Then how could they find marriage congenial? No use to her that on that day some magic would be performed by the reading of the marriage vows and repeating them. Rather, she suspected with anomalous wisdom, that the reverse would be true—that conjugal intimacy would only increase their intolerance of each other.

Watching his very apparent enjoyment of the food and the critical manner with which he inspected everything to ascertain if it were quite according to his orders, she shuddered inwardly. Perhaps that was why he wanted her—she happened to fit his requirements. Every way he would demand that he got exactly what he had ordered. Might it not be possible then, if she could not live up to his specifications, that he would dismiss her with the same disgust with which he commanded the waiter to remove the anchovies on toast because his order had been for caviar?

W. H. DONGES DRUG STORE WILL BE MOVED TO NEW LOCATION

The Donges drug store, which has occupied its present location in the Flynn Bldg. at 40 S. Detroit St. for the last thirty and one-half years and owns the distinction of being the second oldest original business in Xenia, will be moved about February 1, 1931 to the Donges Bldg. at 30 S. Detroit St. William H. Donges, local druggist, disclosed Tuesday he expects to surrender his present lease February 1 and relocate the drug store on the first floor room of his own three-story building three doors to the north on the same side of the street.

Mr. Donges purchased the building in 1913 and the ground floor room is now and has been for more than twenty-five years occupied by a branch of The Kroger Grocery and Baking Co., the first Xenia branch of the concern to be established here. The Knights of Columbus has lodge rooms on the second floor of the building while the third floor is unoccupied.

Mr. Donges also announced he plans extensive exterior and interior remodeling work at the new location for his business. An attractive new store front will be built and complete new furniture and equipment, including a modern soda fountain, will be installed.

The new location for the drug store has a twenty-foot front and is ninety-seven feet in length. Whether, as reported, the Kroger branch store may move into the room to be vacated by the drug store, has not been decided.

Bankrupt's Petition For Discharge

IN BANKRUPTCY NO. 2221
O. P. Eavers, Bankrupt.
To the Honorable Robert R. Nevin, Judge of the District Court of the United States, for the Southern District of Ohio, at Dayton, Ohio.

O. P. Eavers, of Ross Township, in the county of Greene, and State of Ohio, in said district, respectfully represents that on the 27th day of March, last past, he was duly adjudged bankrupt under the acts of Congress relating to bankruptcy; that he has duly surrendered all his property and rights of property, and has fully complied with all the requirements of said acts and of the orders of the court touching his bankruptcy.

Wherefore he prays that he may be decreed by the court to have a full discharge from all debts provable against his estate under said bankrupt acts, except such debts as are excepted by law from such discharge.

Dated this 14th day of November, A. D. 1930.

ORDER OF NOTICE
Southern District of Ohio, at Dayton, Ohio.
On this 17th day of November, A. D. 1930, on reading the foregoing petition, it is ordered by the court, that a hearing be had upon the same on the 2nd day of February, A. D. 1931, before said court, at Dayton, in said district, at 9:30 o'clock in the forenoon; and that notice thereof be published in the Xenia Gazette, a newspaper printed in said district and that all known creditors and other persons in interest may appear at the said time and place and show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of the said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered by the court, that the clerk shall send by mail to all known creditors, copies of said petition and this order, addressed to them at their places of residence, as stated.

Witness the Honorable Robert R. Nevin, Judge of the said court, and the seal thereof, at Dayton, in said district, on the 17th day of November, A. D. 1930.

READ THIS FIRST: Joretta Dowling is the beautiful daughter of a western merchant, whose socially ambitious mother has influenced her engagement to a wealthy shipbuilder, Norman Williams. He is addicted to drinking and jealousy, but Mrs. Dowling rushes the plans for the wedding in the autumn. Joretta has fallen in love with Jim Norton, the chief engineer on her father's new yacht. She finds he is an aristocrat by birth and a mechanical genius. He confides to her that he is working on a new carburetor for gas engines. Meanwhile, her father is making secret trips with the yacht to a southern port, to visit a mine that he has bought from a party of crooks: Lopez, Mike and a beautiful Mexican girl, Joretta and Norman are attending a house party at Long Beach, given by her friend Audrey Landon. Norman suggests that they all go to Agua Caliente, to which Joretta consents unwillingly. Norman humiliates Joretta there and refuses to leave until the group of three crooks enter the place, and he sees the Mexican girl. Joretta decides to ask Norman to postpone their marriage, but her mother forbids her even to think of such a thing.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER 21
"Yes—oh, good morning, Norman! No, but Jetty is right here. Yes—one moment, please—" she covered the transmitter with her hand, and beamed upon Jetty. "Dear, do be nice to him. If he was a bit indiscreet last night, forgive him. You can't expect a man to be perfect—and he really hasn't another fault. And as for things in his favor. Do be reasonable, dear."

Joretta took the instrument. "Good morning. Yes—oh, fair—" while Mrs. Dowling held her breath awaiting her next words.

Norman was saying, "Of course, you've forgiven me for yesterday, haven't you, sweetheart? You know I'm not myself—"

"But that's just it, Norman—" her mother held up a warning finger. "But you've said that before."

"I know. But I'm really improving, don't you think? And I'll be getting better and better, every day in every way, until I'll be a model husband, with a life guarantee and all."

His confidence in himself didn't convince her—but what chance had she? Even if Norman didn't drink to excess, she wouldn't like him any better. It wasn't just that. She didn't exactly know what all it was. But she had started something she couldn't stop—had "tied a knot with her tongue that she couldn't untie with her teeth."

"May I have lunch with you? I want to see you soon," Norman continued.

"No, thanks. Mother and I have engagements for the afternoon. I'm sorry," she added as an afterthought.

"Worse luck! Well, dinner. How about the yacht club? And perhaps a little ride after. Is the Montezuma in?"

"I think so. Shall I ask mother and dad to go along?"

"Of course. And I'll get Sally and Jack. All have dinner together. Eight o'clock?"

Her mother smiled with infinite relief. "You see, dear? You get to imagining things. Everything clears up in the morning. And all your life it will be that way, no matter whom you marry or don't."

Petty doubts and trifling incidents that assume momentous proportions at the time, and are really nothing. You can't expect perfection in anything. And think what remarkably good fortune is yours, having Norman in love with you like this. He is devoted itself. And add to that what else he is offering you—wealth, social position, family. My dear, you are so fortunate that you can't appreciate it. Feeling better now?" brightly.

"Yes, thank you, mum. I'll be ready to go with you in half an hour."

When her mother had gone, Joretta munched listlessly on a bit of toast, her thoughts confusing her at the same time that her mind felt blank, inert. It would be a colors from which to select, and one were them over and over—why decide on green this time and pink the next time? Such a small matter for decision, and yet women debated the question over and over with all the importance and solemnity of a senate discussing affairs of state.

When they had finished at Mme. Janet's, it was not yet tea-time, so they shopped for gloves, kerchiefs, stockings. There were scores of smaller items yet to assemble. And there was not too much time. Already, florists were timing the blooming of hundreds of flowers for the event; forcing some ahead, holding other bulbs and roots in cold storage until the proper time to start them growing, that all would have reached perfection for that particular day. Even special gold-wrought candelabra were being made to hold the hundreds of white cathedral candles which would flood the altar with their mellifluous glow.

Tradesmen welcomed such events among the social elite. Scores of them shared in the easy expenditures. Perhaps, after all, that was really the compensation for what would otherwise be a waste of effort and display. Live and let live. The luxuries of the wealthy provided employment and profit for those who labored. Distribution.

Mrs. Dowling questioned such price or quantity—only effect and quality. She envisioned every appointment of the ceremony, the reception, the bridal party and the honeymoon, so that as it was within her power. Never did a production manager or stage of screen conceive a more gorgeous spectacle.

Already, she had planned to see last detail the announcement only, her at the smartest hotel, for their guests. Never before had there been such a wedding on the east coast, and she surmised that it would be some years again before another would rival it. Those years in which society and social chroniclers would alude by comparison to the Williams-Dowling nuptials, until Joretta would appear in the limelight—with her own children, perhaps, who would be her grandchildren.

Norman came for them at eight o'clock, in his most genial mood, which had the desired effect on the elder Dowlings. But Joretta could not respond to his ardent consideration of her, try as she did. She found herself, however, even to follow the conversation, for her thoughts insisted upon wandering back to his ruthlessness of the previous day. Surely, love wasn't like that. If you loved a person you couldn't be so inconsiderate as to cause them pain and humiliation one day, and be so deeply concerned for their comfort and happiness the next. She wondered why Norman wanted her, anyway. Why was he so anxious for the day that would bring them into each others' association for the rest of their lives?

Their differences and prejudices were many, she had discovered. Already, her conservatism and
